BRITISH BLAST KRUPP WORKS

Essen Bombed By 1,036 Planes

Second Of Crushing Attacks Is Launched By Huge R.A.F. Force

FOLKESTONE, England, June 2.—(CP)—Great forces of R.A.F. planes roared across the channel today in forays which southeast coast observers called one of the biggest daylight operations of the war. Hour after hour wavy squadrons headed for various targets in northern France. Planes returning early in the evening created a great din.

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—The Royal Air Force turned the lethal, devastating might of 1,036 planes loose on Germany last night, almost all of them on the region of the Nazi arsenal city of Essen, Prime Minister Churchill announced today.

The second of the crushing raids which the R. A. F. has made against the sources of Hitler's military strength in three days struck at the home of the huge Krupp munitions works and Mr. Churchill promised more of even greater severity would follow "when we are joined, as we soon shall be, by the Air Force of the United States."

The Essen raid came after a pause of but one night, when bad weather held the R.A.F.'s great bomb-carrying air armada on the ground, after the mammoth attack by considerably more than 1,000 British bombers on Cologne.

British Losses Are 35 Bombers

Again, British losses were relatively slight for an air offensive of such magnitude. Mr. Churchill said 35 bombers had failed to return.

These losses were nine fewer than the 44 of Saturday night—still far below the 10 per cent losses which military authorities generally agree can be afforded by a successful air smash.

On a basis of comparison with the Cologne attack, Essen probably was deluged under about 6,000,000 pounds of incendiary and explosive bombs poured down from planes manned by 6,000 fliers.

CANUCKS IN ACTION

Canadian fliers again were at the controls of giant four-engined Stirlings, Lancasters, Halifaxes and lighter Wellingtons and Hampdens.

Some of these planes, among them craft which were back in action after having been over Cologne, can carry four tons of missiles.

Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons the raiders had sown numerous and widespread fires last night and that the two raids introduced "a new phase in the British air offensive against Germany" which will put the enemy to "an ordeal the like of which never has been experienced in any country in continuity, severity or magnitude."

He cautioned, however, not to expect all future raids to be "above the four-figure scale" in number of planes adding that "methods of attack will be continually varied according to circumstances."

"DAY SHIFT" BEGINS

Hardly before the last of the night bombers had rolled down on their home bases, the day shift of Britain's stepped-up offensive was in the clear air early today, streaking for the French coast.

Just as the Germans sought to repay for the desolation of Cologne with a retaliatory attack Sunday night on the ancient cathedral city of Canterbury, they asserted today another old-world English town, Ipswich, had been the target of their night air blows.

Although the R.A.F.'s bombers, on which British authorities rely to paralyze Germany's industry city by city, encountered mist last night, they hit hard at their targets in Essen and its environs.

TAKE U. S. OBSERVERS

United States observers were believed to have gone over again with the R.A.F.

They were preparing, presumably, for what Lt.-Gen. Henry Arnold, chief of the United States army air force, yesterday called the hope of American fliers "very soon" to fly and fight beside the R.A.F." in attacks which the Germans "cannot meet, defeat or survive."

British sources said some of the bombers in the smashing attack on Essen took part in the Cologne raid Saturday night.

Essen is a manufacturing city noted chiefly for vital iron and steel works of the Krupp industries.

It lies on the Ruhr river in the Prussian Rhine province about 25 miles northeast of Cologne on the main line of a railway to Berlin. Railroads radiate from Essen to all the principal towns of the Westphalian iron and coal fields.

BOMBED MANY TIMES

British bombers already had struck at the city repeatedly since bombing of the continent was begun on a relatively small scale in 1940.

In ever living memory of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 49th Battalion (Edmonton Regiment) who were killed in action, or died of wounds received at Sanctuary Wood, in Belgium, on June 2nd and 3rd, 1916.

"Men who saw the task and failed not.
Men who looked on death and quailed not.
God hath welcomed into rest."

Gov't Position On Conscription Much Improved

By GRANT DEXTER
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, June 2—After making full allowance for changes and chances it appears today that the government will enter the conscription debate with a better chance of survival than seemed possible a week ago.

Prime Minister King, as the sponsor of the conscription amendments, must move the second reading, and judging by present indications will make his major speech at the outset. The debate is generally expected to begin as soon as the war appropriation bill is passed. This will likely happen today, but as Mr. King must consult the cabinet before making his speech, it would not be surprising if the debate did not open until Thursday or even next week.

SITUATION IMPROVED

The situation appears to have improved because the danger of resignations among the English-speaking ministers has receded. And this, in turn, is true because there is growing confidence that Mr. King will not try to carry concessions to Quebec beyond the breaking point. It is felt that he has come back from his country home in the Gatineau hills determined to have the main debate on conscription take place on the present amendments. Once these are passed, he is thought to be agreeable to direct action by the government in imposing conscription if and when the need for it arises. After the government has passed the order-in-council imposing conscription he is said to favor a vote of confidence by the House of Commons.

So long as Mr. King does not pro-

Today's War Moves

By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

Within less than a week, the war has entered an entirely new phase, and from present indications it may be the beginning of the final one.

Only the beginning, however. The final phase will open when an Allied army lands on the European continent, or Germany collapses internally.

The staggering British air raids on Germany, first on Cologne and now on Essen, with many more to come, constitute a real second front which may spell the doom of Hitlerism.

The percentage of British plane losses in these raids, about three per cent, is low enough to seem probable that they can be continued on the same scale almost indefinitely. Even if the losses should increase and British plane production be unable to keep up with the

DESTROYING ENEMY

British Troops And Planes Slash At Nazi Forces In Libyan Desert

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—Reuters in a dispatch from Cairo tonight reported a considerable Axis force of all arms again is thrusting east behind the British Ain El Gazala-Bir Hacheim line.

CAIRO, June 2.—(AP)—German armored forces, the cream of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Africa Corps, which were trapped east of the Ain El Gazala-Bir Hacheim line, are "being ceaselessly harried and destroyed" by British troops and planes and are being "mopped up," the commander-in-chief announced today.

"Latest reports show the enemy may have withdrawn some of his tanks through the gaps" in the line, a statement by Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck said, but "a large number of his tanks and many transport vehicles, however, remain on the wrong side of this barrier."

"It is still difficult to give a firm estimate of the number of vehicles and tanks knocked out or disabled," the statement said, but it was said the Axis losses have been very great.

Caught behind the British line southwest of Tobruk after skirting it the Axis forces have been struggling since noon of May 30 to hold open two gaps through British minefields and extricate their trapped forces from a costly pounding by British tanks, guns and planes.

British forces, who have failed before to keep Rommel's forces locked in traps where they seemed doomed to annihilation, recognize their desert antagonist as an elusive fighter and one who would not yield without the utmost resistance.

Speculation therefore, is that the reported new Axis manoeuvre is a time-gaining device to hold the Axis forces together while supplies and fuel are brought up so they can fight their way out, rather than try an outright break-away with the resultant risk of heavy casualties.

Another possibility, however, is that Rommel hopes to sit tight until reinforcements can reach him and then try again to shove his drive into forward gear toward Tobruk.

This, on the seventh day since the Germans launched their offensive, the situation still is in flux in the heat and whirling sands of North Africa.

Roosevelt Asks War Declaration On Balkan Lands

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(AP)—President Roosevelt asked Congress to declare war on Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania.

The President, in a terse message to the House of Representatives, said that these three countries had declared war on the United States as "the instruments of Hitler."

They "are now engaged in military activities directed against the United Nations and are planning an extension of these activities," he added.

NEED MASS RAIDS

People Of Reich Cannot Take Bombing As Britons Did, Is Writer's Belief

Frederick C. Oechsner was British United Press central European manager up to the Axis declaration of war against the United States. With years of experience covering the news of Germany, he is an authority of standing. He returned home yesterday aboard the liner Drottningholm which brought back American diplomats and newspapermen from Axis countries.—EDITOR.

By FREDERICK C. OECHSNER

NEW YORK, June 2.—(BUP)—Great Britain started at Cologne and continued last night a new phase of the war which could end it.

Blitzkrieg raids on Britain seem to prove that the war cannot be won by bombs alone. But the Germans cannot take it as the Britons did.

Mass bombings, night after night, are needed, not by 50 or 100 planes, but by 500 or 1,000 concentrated on a single target as at Cologne.

Germans have been anticipating such raids with a sense of impending doom. The Nazis were working fast to prepare for them. In such cities as Berlin, underground corridors are being built to connect cellars in whole blocks of houses; Berlin cellars are being made gas-proof.

Reich Defences Are Still Formidable

Nevertheless, the only real air raid shelters in the capital are those under the government buildings.

Though many guns have been taken from the German anti-air defence organization for the Russian front—to be used for direct fire—the defences behind the German frontier are still formidable. For 50 miles in depth there is a complicated interlocking series of big and small guns. Mobile guns are mounted on flat cars in Berlin railroad yards.

For months the Germans worked on a special bombing plane for use against giant British bombers.

PROVE UNSATISFACTORY

These planes were to fly above the R.A.F. planes and bomb them. But they did not work out satisfactorily in tests.

Now the Germans are working on a new plane, the Heinkel-7. It is called the Thermite. It uses principally incendiary bullets and had been developed for attacks on big bombers. They have had exhaustive tests.

Aside from the damage Britain can do in mass raids, morale will be the big factor. The Germans have not taken bombing well. They were disgusted when British planes first attacked because they had been promised immunity.

In Berlin it was always easy to tell when there had been an air raid. Residents fell asleep in the subways and passed their stations. Waitresses, waiters, shop clerks were irritable, as was everybody

Enemy's Libyan Move Expected Says Churchill

LONDON, June 2. — (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill in a House of Commons statement on Libya said today British forces had foreseen the drive launched by Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel last week and were ready for it.

He said it was clear from captured documents that Rommel intended to defeat the British armored forces and capture Tobruk.

"It is clear we have every reason to be satisfied and more than satisfied with the course the battle so far has taken," the prime minister declared, "and we shall watch its further development with earnest attention.

PLANS GO AWRY

"Fierce fighting still is proceeding and will go on, but whatever may be the result there is not a shadow of doubt that Rommel's plans for his initial offensive have gone completely awry and cost him dear in men and material.

"A conservative estimate gives the number of enemy tanks destroyed or captured as about 260. There is no doubt that the number of enemy transport vehicles destroyed or captured is very large."

"We have also had our losses," he continued. "It is inevitable in a battle of this kind that casualties on both sides in tanks should be high, but our recovery organization is working very well."

He said Gen. Sir Claude Auchin-

REACHES RUSSIA

Convoy Battles Five-Day Attack

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—A large United Nations convoy carrying British and United States war supplies to Russia has reached a north Russian port after a running battle of five days and nights against German U-boats and well over 100 Nazi planes, the Admiralty announced today.

With almost constant daylight now in the far north waters, the admiralty said this was the most difficult time of the year to push convoys over that route.

But in spite of such conditions, the admiralty indicated only six or seven Allied ships were sunk, calling the German claim of bagging 18 ships an "exaggeration of over 175 per cent."

(The Germans claimed last Friday that 17 ships totalling 114,000 tons had been sunk by attacks on the convoy during several days.)

GALLANT WORK

"That our losses were not far higher than they were against this scale of air and underwater attacks," the admiralty declared, "was due to the gallant defence and magnificent handling of the heavily laden ships in the convoy no less than to the efforts of the escort.

"The officers and crews of both the convoy and the escorts have the satisfaction of knowing that they have delivered large and important reinforcements to Russia's equipment in her present struggle."

The first attack was delivered the evening of May 25 by Heinkel torpedo-carrying planes and Junkers-88 dive bombers. These were beaten off with no loss, the admiralty said.

But thereafter the German attacks were virtually uninterrupted until last Saturday, the admiralty added.

Committee Favors Free Competition In Rail Business

OTTAWA, June 2.—(CP)—The House of Commons railway committee in a report tabled in the House today recommended there should be no instructions in government departments as to routing of business and "every transportation company should be allowed to compete on its own merits."

Edmonton Pilot Takes Part In Devastating Attack On Essen

By ALAN RANDAL

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—Hundreds of Canadians played a key part in last night's second devastating aerial ride over the Ruhr in three days.

It was learned officially Canadian pilots were at controls of huge four-engined Stirlings, Lancasters and Halifaxes, and the lighter Wellingtons and Hampdens, loaded with the great export of high explosives and incendiaries Britain is sending Germany.

Altogether nine all-Canadian squadrons were used in the Essen raid—four bomber, four fighter and the Canadian Boston interceptor-bomber outfit.

In addition to these squadrons, it was authoritatively learned that many more Canadians flew in R.A.F. squadrons.

Prior to the smash at the Ruhr, Canadian-manned fighters participated in R.A.F. trans-channel sweeps, escorted Boston bombers to targets in enemy-occupied territory and later helped clear a path for the returning bombers by patrolling enemy airdromes whence interceptor fighters rise.

PO. IAN COLQUHOUN

Among the fighter squadrons active in the continuous sweeps were those commanded by Sqdn. Ldrs. A. G. Douglas, R. E. Morrow, L. A. Deere and R. B. Newton.

Typical of the many Canadians scattered through the R.A.F. who participated in Saturday's and last night's attacks were 17 officers and sergeants in the Lancaster squadron which raided Augsburg, May 17.

Included were PO. Ian Colquhoun, Edmonton; Flt. Sgt. F. C. Kruger, Bede, Man.; Flt. Sgt. H. P. Legace, La Salle, Man.; Flt. Sgt. R. J. Oates, Aylesbury, Sask.; Flt. Sgt. E. H. Coome, Lamont, Alta.; Sgt. A. J. McPhee, Vancouver.

Post-War Plans

Viscount Cranborne, colonial secretary, announced in the House of Lords today that Britain is discussing post-war problems with the dominions, the United States, Russia and other Allied nations. He said the discussions are now at a "confidential stage."

Great Britain, Allies Holding Post-War Talks

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—The British government is discussing post-war problems and exchanging views with the Dominions, the United States, Soviet Russia and other United Nations, Viscount Cranborne, colonial secretary, announced today in the House of Lords.

Lord Cranborne, who is also government leader in the Upper House, said the discussions are at a "confidential stage" and the British government cannot make a general declaration.

Of Russia, he said:

"We are in close touch with Russia, which is playing a big part in the winning of the war and his an equally great part to play in winning the peace."

Before Lord Cranborne's statement, Lord Addison, Labor leader in the House of Peers, had argued there must be a long-term control of German education if there is to be peace in the future, and urged that the government should prepare promptly its proposals for world settlement after the war.

Fear Of Invasion Keeping Big Italian Army At Home

Million Men Trained To Fight In Russia Kept In Readiness To Meet Any Allied Invasion

Reynolds Packard, British United Press manager in Rome until the United States entered the war, reached New York yesterday with American correspondents aboard the Drottningholm. In the following dispatch, which was killed by censorship at Lisbon, he discloses Axis preparations to meet an expected Allied invasion of Western Europe.—EDITOR.

By REYNOLDS PACKARD

ABOARD THE LINER DROTTNINGHOLM, in New York Harbor, June 2.—(BUP)—The fear of an Allied invasion of Axis Europe has forced Fascist Italy to hold a mobile army of 1,000,000 men in readiness to rush to any continental sector that might be attacked while Hitler's legions are fighting in Russia.

The Italian troops, originally trained to fight in Russia, have been forced on the defensive and nailed to the mainland of Italy because of America's entry into the war and the threat of an Allied invasion.

So serious do Axis militarists take the threat of invasion that Fascist Italy is sending only more forces to Russia this summer. Italian assistance to Axis fighting is now limited to a token offering of only 100,000 soldiers.

ITALY DOES PATROL WORK

While interned in Italy I was told by a reliable source that Hitler and Mussolini had decided that Italy must take over most of the patrol work in Europe against Anglo-Saxon landing parties while Germany will go all out in its fight against Russia.

At the same time it is reported that as part of this fear of invasion, Axis militarists are trying to line up France, Spain and Portugal.

According to some of these reports which Latin-American diplomats aboard the Drottningholm also heard while they were passing through Portugal, Axis forces composed mainly of Italians would be sent to occupy strategic points along the Atlantic shoreline of the Iberian peninsula.

While interned in Italy I also heard it said that Italian soldiers might even be used to replace German troops of occupation in France so that more Germans would be able to go to the eastern front.

3,000,000 TROOPS

The prospect of an invasion into Axis Europe also has given a new impetus to anti-Axis elements throughout Europe and reinforcements of Italian soldiers have been sent to Croatia and Montenegro where revolutionary patriots are constantly battling with Italian soldiers. Even in Greece it has been deemed necessary to increase Italian military contingents.

I estimate that Italy has a total of 3,000,000 men under arms. One million of them are marking time for fear of invasion. One million and a half others are scattered over southeastern Europe holding bayonets over the peoples of Croatia, Montenegro, Albania and Greece who may revolt the moment Allied soldiers disembark in Europe.

Then there are about 100,000 Italian soldiers in Russia and probably fewer than 500,000 in Africa where Germans already have taken active control of the fighting.

HEAVY LOSSES

The Italian army finds itself less and less fit to fight. It has already suffered heavy losses in Greece and Africa. Some observers estimate Italian loss of man-power including prisoners and casualties at nearly 500,000 since Italy entered the war June 10, 1940. They also have lost some of their best artillery and tank equipment and are already beginning to depend upon French tanks. Italians have also been forced to use arms captured from Austria in the first World War, so low have military stocks become.

One of the greatest handicaps of the Italian army is the lack of enthusiasm. The fighting spirit so necessary for victory is missing.

Practically every Italian soldier with whom I managed to speak while I was an internee had only one thing to say—"May this war end soon."

One of the strangest sights in Italy is to see usually blase Italians turn and look with shaking heads at German soldiers and sailors walking in Rome as though they were creatures from Mars.

High-Ranking Nazi Officer Is Now Prisoner

By RICHARD D. McMILLAN

KNIGHTSBRIDGE, in the Libyan Desert, June 1.—(Delayed)—(BUP)—A high-winged monoplane marked with the German Maltese cross and swastika drenched over the British mine fields, scouting the desert tank battle.

British anti-aircraft fire cracked and a plume of smoke spurted from the plane. It hurtled toward the earth, straightened out in line to crash-land, crumpled and burst into flames.

McMillan

From the wreckage struggled an officer in the uniform of the German Afrika Korps. His face was spattered with blood of his dead pilot as he limped through the minefield to a British dugout.

"I am Colonel General Ludwig Crüewell of the German Panzer forces," he announced to the astounded Imperials in English flavored with a heavy German accent. "I surrender."

Thus on May 26, the British Eighth Army captured one of Hitler's crack generals, second in command of the Axis North Africa armies, the highest ranking German officer taken prisoner in this war.

Crüewell's identity was verified by his papers.

PLANNED OFFENSIVE

He was taken immediately in an armored car to Tobruk where he spent the night under guard in an air-raid shelter. At Tobruk, it was established that he had planned the Axis' current offensive.

(The British radio reported that Crüewell inquired when he arrived in Cairo the location of the Shepheard hotel. A British officer asked why, and Crüewell replied, "Rommel intended to have his headquarters there when he took Cairo."

Italo 5th Column Biggest In World

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP)—Richard G. Massock, chief of the former Rome bureau of the Associated Press, said last night that the biggest fifth column in the world is in Italy—and it is working for the United States.

"It is composed of virtually all those Italians, and they number millions, who have relatives or friends in America," he said during a radio round-table discussion over N.B.C. with five other war reporters with whom he arrived home today from war-seared Europe on the diplomat-exchange ship Drottningholm.

"Some Italian towns have so many returned emigrants that the inhabitants are called 'Americani,'" said the reporter.

"Why, even the turnkey who locked me into a cell in Rome's central prison 'the day Mussolini declared war against the United States told me he really was an American," he related.

"Those American Fifth Columnists are not saboteurs or spies. But their sympathies are with us."

Nazis Cannot Take Bombing As Britons Did

else. Unquestionably war industry was slowed.

Berliners used to say it was easy to tell what sort of night a man had spent.

If the day after an air raid, a man said good evening, he had not been asleep. If he said good morning, he had been asleep. If he said Heil Hitler, he was still asleep. That was a common joke in the Nazi capital.

The Germans do not accept the propaganda ministry's story that all British raids are directed against civilian targets.

Those not sympathetic to the Nazis describe a new British bomb. It has a rubber nose and a magnetic device. When it strikes, it bounces about on its rubber nose until its magnetic device attracts it to a church, a hospital, or an old people's home. Then it explodes.

NAZIS SHIVER

Germans hear by word of mouth about the big British raids. Though I was interned, I heard that after the bombing of Rostock, 69,000 of the city's 75,000 people were evacuated. The stories of those raids sent a shiver through Germans — and now comes Cologne.

The damage to the prestige of the German air force among the German people has been great.

Germans repeat the promise Field Marshal Hermann Goering made them, that if an enemy plane ever reached Berlin he would take off his coat and go to work.

"He's down to his underclothes now," they say.

Word has got round that even though many anti-aircraft guns and their crews were taken to the eastern front, the air defence crews as well as the air force itself have taken a terrific beating. The mortality among gun crews is reported to be frightfully high.

PEOPLE JITTERY

One daylight stratosphere raid caused special anxiety to officials. Planes flew in at more than 30,000 feet and could hardly be detected. Counter-attack was futile.

Germans were jittery even in those days of small-scale raids. Two youths, flying at an unauthorized height over a northern town in the Stettin area, were forced to make an emergency landing because of fog. Their planes caused an air raid alarm. The youths, walked to town and were ordered off the streets into shelter. Though they protested that they themselves had caused the alarm. They were kept under cover along with everybody else for hours.

British fliers have the respect and to an extent the sympathy of many Germans who admire them for their nerve in making the long flight to Germany and staying over a city to bomb while fuel runs low. They call the British too brave, and say also they are too inexperienced.

Unemployed Men Swamp Staffs In Registration Rush

CALGARY, June 2.—(CP)—Registration of unemployed men, between the ages of 16 and 60 years, began with such a rush yesterday at the Calgary office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, Burns building, that the staff was unable to keep up with applications. There were never less than 75 men in the office at any time throughout the day, W. H. Ross, district officer, said. Many of the applicants were given appointment slips for later in the week, and the staff of interviewing officers will be enlarged to cope with the unexpected rush.

No Evidence Of Cabinet Crisis On Conscription

OTTAWA, June 2.—(CP)—The Ottawa Evening Journal said yesterday that talk of a "cabinet crisis" swept Parliament Hill during the week-end in connection with forthcoming debate on the government's bill to pave the way for unlimited compulsory military service, but that it had been unable to locate the "crisis."

The Journal said the week-end rumors were to the effect that Prime Minister Mackenzie King faced grave revolt among his Quebec supporters that Mr. King was threatened with resignation of three of his English-speaking ministers, and that Mr. King himself might resign and ask Finance Minister Ilsley to head a new government.

"The Journal after diligent Saturday and Sunday detective work, was unable to locate the 'crisis,'" the paper said.

NO EVIDENCE

"It couldn't find evidence of threatened or possible immediate resignations of English-speaking cabinet ministers. It couldn't find the remotest indication that Mr. King would resign, either now or in the near future. It could find only —what everybody knew before— that between 35 and 40 Quebec members might vote against the elimination of clause 3 from the Mobilization Act, with this making no immediate vital difference.

"Prime Minister King spent the week-end at his Kingsmere retreat. Before going there he is understood to have let it be known to his followers that his position is:

"1—Deletion of Clause 3 from the Mobilization Act means nothing more than a freeing of the government's hands, will not necessarily bring conscription.

"2—Enforcement of conscription will depend upon the impacts of events; upon the course and demands of the war; with the government ready to adopt and enforce it if or when the need arises.

"3—The question of whether, in the event of conscription being resorted to, the matter will be brought to the house once more for consideration and debate, has not been decided definitely."

Ration Forgery

VICHY, June 2.—(AP)—France's first execution for forging ration cards appeared likely yesterday with the arrest of a man named Louis Guillot who had been sentenced in absentia by the Lyon tribunal of state. Sentences of death have been passed in other cases but the condemned parties never had been caught.

Fruits Of Total War Now Being Reaped By Nazis

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—Germany has "beginning to reap what it has sown—total war," Home Secretary Herbert Morrison said last night in a special broadcast to German workers. "The sooner German workers get rid of Hitler and his regime, the sooner the day will come on which they will take their place again in the common fight of the working classes for a better world," Mr. Morrison added.

AIR MINISTRY OPINION IS DIVIDED

Agitation In Reich For Bombing Eastern U.S. Cities

No Indication Nazi System Is Reaching Breaking Point But Inner Tension Growing

The following dispatch by Frederick C. Oechsner, who was United Press manager in Berlin until America entered the war, was brought to New York aboard the liner Drottningholm. —EDITOR.

By FREDERICK C. OECHSNER

ABOARD LINER DROTTNINGHOLM, in New York Harbor, June 2—(UP)—The use of German long-range bombers in token air raids on eastern coast cities of the United States is being agitated by a section of the Nazi air ministry in Berlin, but most Germans now take the viewpoint that even success in Russia this summer would fail to achieve the total victory once pictured by Hitler.

There is no indication that the Nazi system has reached the breaking point, but there is increasing inner tension and the cracks are widening in the reich. Even on the question of bombing or attempting to bomb North American cities there is a division in the air ministry.

One group favors token raids as an effective weapon but another group is strongly opposed to such an attempt on the grounds that it would unite the people more firmly and increase their war effort.

DESPERATE EFFORT

A desperate effort is being made to crush the Russian army finally this summer in the realization that a two-front war is inevitable. The likelihood of an attempted invasion of the British Isles seems to be becoming remote.

Sabotage and go-slow resistance are on the increase in Germany and the occupied territories, on ships and even in offices. Executions for acts inimical to the state are put at 10 per day in the reich alone.

Information which I have been able to get from reliable American sources since being released from internment at Bad Nauheim corroborate these general impressions:

The Nazis, whether from sheer desperation or from an actual belief in final victory are ready to fight like wild cats on any front that exists or opens up, and that they still possess tremendous striking power.

Although internal collapse as the result of external military pressure will cause the eventual downfall of the Nazis, no big internal crackup may be predicted within the immediate future.

STILL DANGEROUS ENEMY

In other words, with everything at stake including their own political existence, the Nazis still are a highly dangerous enemy, although it is definite that they will be beaten without and within. Every ounce of energy has been geared into this summer's effort on both the home and fighting fronts. In understanding that the so-called "outer ring" of Berlin's air raid defense girdle has been largely dismantled to free the guns for use on the eastern front.

Throughout the winter, new men have been called up incessantly, some as young as 17 years old, and every man who could possibly be released for active duty has been replaced on the home front, in some instances by persons physically defective. Women and even children have been pressed into the battle of labor.

The German people are not ready to give up; they're in it too deep now, and the huge blood-gost to date has to be justified by the attempt at final victory.

The limit of sacrifice and self-denial on the population's part, spurred by the twins of propaganda and terrorism, has not been reached, even if more of them all the time are becoming convinced that defeat itself would not be too high a price to pay for getting rid of the Nazi machine.

SOLDIERS DETERMINED

Soldiers home on leave from the Russian front are reported to me as going back, not gladly, but with a grim determination to crush the Soviet military power now in one supreme effort. The vicious winter and the terrible mauling they took on some sectors has not undermined the morale of the younger men, at least, I am told, and they seem to be strongly impelled by the Nazi-instilled holy mission of eradicating Bolshevism. The older men are showing the strain.

Total casualties on the eastern front up to a few weeks ago have been admitted by military quarters as 1,500,000 dead and wounded, according to my informants.

Tension between the Nazi AA and the regular army—the classic enmity that will some day flare up when things reach the breaking point—is continuing to build up steadily, I am told. There is new authentic corroboration of the old story that the AA and Gestapo are equipping corner houses, commanding dark spots where fighting may occur, as machine-gun forts.

War Status Of Unfit Men Now Being Studied

OTTAWA June 2—(CP)—War Services Minister Thorson told the House of Commons last night that regulations are being worked out to make use of men who fail to attain the health standards required by the fighting forces under the compulsory military training plan.

They could be used in some activity where the health standards were not as high as those of the fighting forces.

Answering questions by Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South), Mr. Thorson said he agreed that every effort should be made to advise young men when the age group called for compulsory service was practically exhausted and extension of the age limits was in prospect. This would permit the men to put their affairs in order in anticipation of a call for service.

Dealing with liability for service for residents in Canada who were not citizens, Mr. Thorson said other categories which had to be considered included enemy aliens.

He said that British subjects from other Dominions at present were not liable to call. Reciprocal arrangements with the countries involved were being worked out, so that they would deal with Canadian nationals in the same manner as Canada dealt with their nationals.

Seven Members Are Named To Varsity Board

Brown, B.Sc., Calgary; and Mrs. Susan B. Gunn, Lloydminster.

With the exception of Judge Dubuc, all appointees are former board members.

Mr. Parlee was reappointed for a three-year period. He was chairman of the special committee that made a survey of the administration of the university and also an investigation into the institution's organization problems. This report was submitted to the provincial government and amendments to the University Act included, to a large extent, the committee's recommendations.

President of the Alberta Federation of Labor, Mr. Farmilo was also reappointed for three years.

Judge Dubuc of the district court of Northern Alberta is a new appointee. He will serve for three years.

Those named for two-year terms are Dr. Stanley, former M.P. for Calgary, and Dr. McCall, principal of Alberta College.

OTHER MEMBERS

The following are also members of the board by right of the offices they held, or ex-officio members: Mr. Justice Frank Ford, chancellor of the university; Dr. Robert Newton, president of the university; Dr. G. B. Sanford, president, and Hugh John Macdonald, K.C., M.L.A., vice-president of the University Alumni Association; J. F. Percival, deputy provincial treasurer; Dr. G. Fred McNally, deputy minister of education.

Fuller control of the university has been vested in the board of governors under amendments to the University Act. The bill gives the board virtual control of the university administration.

Under the new act, membership of the university senate is reduced from 54 to not more than 25. Sixteen statutory or ex-officio members of the senate are provided for, consisting of: Chancellor of the university, president of the university, chairman of the board of governors; supervisor of schools for the province; principal of St. Stephen's College; rector of St. Joseph's College; principal of Mount Royal Junior College, rector of St. Aidan's College.

Principal of the Provincial Institute of Technology and Art; director of the department of extension at the university; president and vice-president of the Alumni Association; president of the Students' Union; two representatives of the general faculty and one from the cleanig council.

WILL NAME NINE

Statutory members will name nine appointed members, who, according to the act, shall be selected to represent agriculture, business, labor, industry, public education and organizations devoted to social and cultural welfare. Statutory members are expected to meet shortly to complete the university senate set-up.

Text Of Prime Minister Churchill's Statement

LONDON, June 3—(AP)—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's statement in the House of Commons today follows:

I thought the house would wish to have some news of the important and very severe battle which has now been proceeding for a week in the Libyan desert. Accordingly, I asked Gen. Auchinleck for a statement and I do not think I can do better than read out his actual words.

"On the evening of May 26 Gen. Rommel launched the German Afrika Corps in the attack. He was at pains to explain in an order of the day issued to German and Italian troops in his pay, that in the course of great operations they were to carry through a decisive attack against our forces in Libya and that for this purpose he had made ready and equipped forces superior in number with perfected armament and powerful air force to give it support. In conclusion he hailed his majesty the king of Italy and emperor of Ethiopia, the Duce of the Empire, the Fuehrer of Great Germany.

READY FOR ATTACK

"We had foreseen this attack and were ready for it.

"From captured documents it was clear that Rommel's object was to defeat our armored forces and capture Tobruk.

"The main ingredients of his plan were: First, to capture our defended locality at Bir Hacheim held by our gallant Allies, the Free French; secondly, to pass around by the south of Bir Hacheim the German Africa corps comprising the 15th and 21st armored divisions, to be followed closely by the German 90th light division, the 20th Italian mobile corps, comprising the 132nd Ariete armored division, and the 101st Trieste motorized division; thirdly, to attack in strength our position running south from the coast at Ain El Gazala to Capuzzo Road.

"These were held by the South African and 50th British divisions, the latter including battalions of the East Yorkshire regiment, Green Howards and Durham Light Infantry.

"Air reconnaissance had clearly indicated enemy preparations for the attack and in consequence our air force opened a counter offensive on the 21st with heavy attacks against enemy forward airdromes.

"These attacks were continued each night supplemented by our flying dawn and dusk attacks by light bombers and fighters.

"The enemy paid us the compliment of trying to emulate our example on three nights prior to his final advance on the 27th.

"He failed to achieve any success and lost a number of aircraft to our fighters and anti-aircraft artillery.

DRIVEN OFF

"On the night of May 26-27, the German Africa Corps carried out its part of the plan and passed to the south of Bir Hacheim, moving north with great rapidity towards Acroma and also toward the old battlefields of El Duda and Sidi Rezegh, which were actually reached by some of its most forward troops. These soon were driven off by our armored forces.

"Some Axis tanks actually reached the escarpment overlooking the coast road north of Acroma but failed to interrupt communications between Tobruk and the South African troops holding our forward positions.

"It is now known that on the same night the enemy attempted landings from the sea at this spot, presumably with the object of joining up with these tanks but the hostile craft were driven off by our naval forces acting in close co-operation with the army.

"Long before they approached El Adem or Acroma Axis motorized troops were brought to action by the 1st and 7th British armored divisions ably seconded by British heavy tank brigades in the area.

"The full brunt of the enemy's initial advance to the east was taken by 3rd Indian Motor Brigade group which was overborne by the sheer weight of metal but not until after it had inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy and seriously impeded his advance.

"In addition his columns were subjected to repeated attacks by our fighters and bombers.

ADVANCE DELAYED

"Meanwhile, the attack on Bir Hacheim by the Italian mobile corps had been beaten off by the Free French—or fighting French troops—with heavy loss and the northward advance of these forces seems to have been seriously delayed in consequence.

"The third part of the enemy's plan, namely attacks against the northern front of our main positions south of Ain Gazala materialized on the 27th. This achieved little or nothing. Nevertheless they seem to have caused the enemy a number of casualties.

"The attempt to break through our defence on the coast road by the Ain El Gazala inlet was easily defeated by the 1st South African Division.

HEAVY FIGHTING

"Throughout May 28-29-30 there was very heavy continuous fighting between our armored divisions and brigades and the German Africa Corps backed up by the Italian mobile corps, the battle swayed backwards and forwards over a wide area from Acroma in the north to Bir Hacheim, 40 miles to the south; from El Adem outside Tobruk to our minefields 30 miles to the west.

"Our troops gave the enemy no rest and, finding himself running short of supplies and water, he tried to make gaps in our minefields, one along a general line on the Capuzzo road and another 10 miles to the south. These two gaps lay on either side of a defended area held by a brigade of infantry from the north of England.

STRONGLY RESISTED

"This brigade strongly resisted the enemy's attempt to pass his transport through their ranks and on May 28 Air Vice-Marshal Conyngham decided to direct the whole air force on to a low attack against the enemy's armor and motor transport in this region.

"These attacks were maintained with a maximum intensity throughout the following three days, reaching a peak as the enemy attempted to pass through the gaps.

"It is still difficult to give a firm estimate of the number of vehicles and tanks knocked out or disabled by these attacks but there has been ample confirmation that the effect was very great.

"Meantime, each night our night bombers were attacking the enemy's forward airfields and communications.

"By nightfall of May 31, the enemy succeeded in withdrawing many of his tanks and much transport into one or the other of the gaps which he then proceeded to pass through from our attacks from east by bringing many of his anti-tank guns, with which he was well equipped, into action.

CRAKELESSLY HARRIED

"A large number of his tanks and many transport vehicles, however, remain on the wrong side of this barrier. These are still being ceaselessly harried and destroyed by our troops vigorously aided by the fighters and bombers of our air force.

"Latest reports show the enemy may have withdrawn some of his tanks through the gap areas and a good deal of his transport as far back at 30 miles west of our forward positions, but this is unconfirmed.

"The country to the east of Bir Hacheim—that is, in our area—is being mopped up by our troops which have destroyed many tanks and vehicles in this area and captured two large workshops."

Since fighting is still proceeding and the battle by no means is over, further heavy fighting is to be expected, but whatever the result there is no shadow of doubt, says Gen. Auchinleck, that Rommel's plans for his initial offensive have gone completely awry and this failure has cost him dear in men and materials.

AXIS FORCES ACTIVE

Axis air forces have been very active throughout the operations and have made continuous attacks on our troops and communications, but they too have lost heavily at the hands of our air forces and anti-aircraft guns.

The speed and effectiveness with which air support has been given is shown once again in the intimate co-operation which has been achieved between the two services in this theatre.

There has not been time yet to assess the damage inflicted on the enemy, but a conservative estimate gives the number of his tanks destroyed or captured at about 260 and there is no doubt at all that the number of his transport vehicles destroyed or captured is very large.

We have also had our losses and it is inevitable that in a battle of this kind there should be armored forces the casualties on both sides in tanks should be high.

RECOVERY ORGANIZATION

Our recovery organization, however, is working very well and whereas we had retained control of the battlefield and so can salvage our tanks, the enemy cannot recover many of his, which should be permanently lost to him.

Owing to three days of concentration of low cloud over Libya of the desperate attempts of enemy fighters to protect the land forces, our air losses have not been light, though in a number of instances our pilots returned safe, their aircraft being recovered.

Gen. Auchinleck ends by repeating that the battle is not yet over, the issue still remains to be decided, but that the spirit and morale of our men in Libya, both in the army and air forces, whether they came from India, South Africa, the United Kingdom or elsewhere in the British Commonwealth, and that of our most gallant allies, the Free French, is magnificent.

In a further telegraph the Commander in Chief adds, "The skill, determination and pertinacity shown by Gen. Ritchie and his Corps Commanders, Lt.-Gens. Morrie and Gott throughout this difficult strenuous week of hard, continuous fighting has been of the highest order."

He further dwells upon the excellent performance of American tanks with which all users are well pleased. He says our new heavy anti-tank gun has done great execution.

From all the above it is clear we have every reason to be satisfied and more than satisfied with the course which the battle so far has taken, and that we should watch its further developments with earnest attention.

I ought not to sit down without referring to the mammoth air raid delivered by the R.A.F. on the Cologne region during the night of May 30-31.

RECORDS EXCELLED

In this triumph of skill, daring and diligence against the enemy all previous records of night bombing have been doubled and excelled.

On that occasion no fewer than 1,130 British-manned aircraft operated across the sea. Results have been of a devastating character, but accurate photography so far has been hampered by the pall of smoke which hangs over the stricken area.

Last night also 1,036 machines of the R.A.F. visited the continent. Nearly all of these operated in the Essen region. First reports received indicate numerous widespread conflagrations. From the second large scale raid 35 of our bombers are missing.

I do not wish it to be supposed all our raids in the immediate future will be above this four-figure scale.

VARY METHOD

The methods of attack will be continually varied, according to circumstances.

On the other hand these two great night bombing raids mark the introduction of a new phase in the British air offensive against Germany, and they will increase markedly in scale when we are joined, as we soon shall be, in the air force of the United States.

As the year advances all German cities, harbors and centres of war production will be subjected to an ordeal the like of which has not been experienced by any country in continuity, severity or magnitude.

The house will wish to express compliments to Air Marshal Harris, officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the bomber command, including the efficient and devoted maintenance staff. Upon the work they are doing and the results they achieved.

Congratulations upon these encouraging events also are due to the secretary of state for air, the chief of the air staff and the air ministry.

Cologne—Just Smouldering Ruin After R.A.F. Smash

By DREW MIDDLETON

WITH THE R.A.F. BOMBER COMMAND, June 2.—(AP)— "Listen, brother, there's not a damned thing left in Cologne." It was a 21-year-old Texan, Bud Cardinal of Fort Worth, speaking and Bud ought to know for he was one of the first R. A. F. airmen to fly over the now-ruined German Rhineland city in Saturday night's 1,250-plane raid.

"You had to line up as though it was a movie," he elaborated. "We went in plane by plane and when the boys really got swinging you couldn't see the explosions of the bombs because the fire down there was so big."

Bud, who came out of Texas to join what he called "the Royal Texas Air Force" in Canada, was among the 6,000-odd English, Scottish, Australian, Canadian and Barbadoes airmen who wheeled the big bombers over Cologne and its industrial environs.

BLOWN TO BITS

Jock, a 19-year-old Scottish veteran—Cologne was his 18th big raid —said the huge Hohenzollern bridge across the Rhine "must have been blown to bits; nothing could stand up to what we gave them."

Leonard Johnson, 28, of Corpus Christi, Texas, said sourly: "Don't ask me. I never reached Cologne. One of my motors conked out and I had to turn back. A hell of a note; I've been over five times on big raids but I missed the brass ring."

Both Cardinal and Johnson agreed that "the British are good." "They get you down some times because they're so anxious to be correct," said Johnson. "But after the way they organized this raid and carried it out, I take off my hat to them."

"They got guts, too," Cardinal put in, "though they don't go around hollering about it.

"A kid in my plane got a machine-gun bullet through his leg Saturday night. We didn't know about it until he collapsed getting out of the plane.

HARD LESSONS

"The British learned this business the hard way and the right way And say, these mass raids are the thing.

"Those krauts didn't know what to do the other night. Fighters and flaks all fired wild. If we keep rollin' and our air force comes in we'll end this war sooner than you think."

Today's War Moves

pace, America's promise to put its own air fleet alongside Britain gives assurance that there will be no let-up.

The tangible value of the raids is great. They accomplish at least four important results, as follows:

First and foremost, they strike at the vitals of Germany's war industry and her network of communications. They are beginning to cut the sinews of war which Germany needs on the battlefields of Russia and for her submarines at sea and for her air fleets.

HIT GERMAN MORALE

Second, they strike hard at the morale of the German people, already strained. Correspondents just returned from Germany are confident the German people cannot take such punishment as the British did. Moreover, it bitterly disillusions them, since they were assured by the leaders that Germany was supreme in the air and German cities would not be bombed.

Third, they put new heart in the Russians and tend to ease the pressure on the Russian front. News of the raids has been received with the greatest satisfaction in Moscow.

Fourth, they encourage the rebellious peoples of conquered Europe and keep the flame of revolt alive for the day when they will be able to turn on their conquerors and help throw off the yoke.

The success and continuation of the raids show beyond much doubt that the British had definite superiority in the air, if not control. In their final raid on Canterbury, the Germans employed only about 25 planes, in contrast to the swarms which the British sent to the continent.

GERMAN LOSSES HEAVY

The Russians claim air superiority over the Germans on the eastern front, and the British claim the same in Libya. An R.A.F. Eagle pilot just back from Libya said he understood the ratio of German losses to British was three to one.

Combined with the raids over Germany, events of the last few days all have been unfavorable to Hitler. The Russians apparently have stopped the Germans on the Kharkov front and they claim that a projected German drive by way of Rostov to the Caucasus oil fields has been thwarted. Even if Hitler opens his general spring offensive in Russia, he will do it under much less favorable auspices.

In Libya, Gen. Erwin Rommell's drive towards Tobruk and the Egyptian border has been thrown back, and he is engaged in extricating his tanks to reform his positions in the west.

Wind Problem

CHICAGO, June 2—Knuckle ball pitchers like Fred Fitzsimmons now coach with the Dodgers, Dutch Leonard of the Senators, Ted Lyons of the White Sox and Jim Tobin of the Braves prefer to pitch into the wind.

Frisch Holds No Umpire Grudges

PITTSBURGH, June 2—Frank Frisch of Pittsburgh Pirates says he is being discriminated against by anti-squawk legislation.

"I'll tell you why I object to these hands-off umpires rules," says Onkel Frank. "I object to the league sinking me out with a couple of other managers and saying the rule is because of us. I don't squawk more than five times a season on ball and strike decisions. My squawks are on the bases, and the way umpires go about their work. I'm no umpire baiter. I don't carry a grudge against an umpire into the following day."

CANADA'S GREATEST INDUSTRY

Starting from scratch—without factories, without trained personnel, without blue-prints—Canada's scant twelve million people have built a tremendous armament industry.

Guns, tanks, motorized vehicles, planes, ships, small arms, explosives—equipment of every kind—are today in mass production. We have created a navy of 400 ships. We have equipped fighting forces of 450,000 men. We have played the major role in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, one of the greatest schools for fighting airmen the world has ever created.

Such in broad outline is Canada's proud record. Much more remains to be done. Still greater effort, still greater self-denial must be the solemn pledge of all till victory is won.

This advertisement is published as a contribution to the national war effort of this country's war effort and as an inspiration through the days ahead. For reasons of security complete figures are not available. The facts presented however, are impressive evidence of the growing might of Canada's war machine.

The Times Have Changed

Speaking at Vancouver, the director of selective national service said it may be necessary to put more occupations on the restricted list, and even to close down some non-essential industries, in order to get men needed in the war industries. A registration of unemployed women was suggested as another possible expedient to make the labor supply go round.

We are not yet far enough from the great unemployment period to make it easy to sense the reality of a growing scarcity of men—and women—to fill jobs. It helps somewhat to recall that experts say there must now be eighteen producers and transport workers to keep each soldier supplied. In the last war the accepted necessary ratio was five workers to each soldier. Now nearly four times as many are required.

There are now about 430,000 men in our fighting forces. At the eighteen-to-one ratio it is doubtful if there are enough available industrial workers in the country to maintain these men fully if they were all engaged in actual fighting and using up equipment and munitions at the necessary rate. Nor is it to be forgotten that Canadian-made equipment is going to every front from Russia to India.

Noting these facts, a labor shortage in Canada before very long is conceivable, difficult as it may be to keep from thinking of the present in the light of conditions which existed not so very long ago.

Taking No Time Out

Having stalled the Nazis at Kharkov, the Russians opened a new offensive in the Kalinin region, 700 miles to the north. The fighting in the south was to prevent Hitler starting his projected drive toward the Caucasus. That in the north is to oust the enemy from fortified positions where he may have planned to mark time if the drive in the south got going. If the former was a defensive-offensive on the part of the Russians, the new move looks more like a thrust intended to gain territory and push the enemy back toward the Polish border.

Moscow counts up the Nazi losses in the Kharkov campaign as 90,000 men killed or captured, 540 tanks destroyed, 200 planes brought down and 1551 guns destroyed or captured. Credibility is given to the figures because Moscow admits Russian losses of 75,000 men, 300 tanks, 832 guns and 124 planes. As the battle ended in a draw, if not in the Russian favor, this comparison looks realistic.

The fantastic figures issued at Berlin will hardly convince even Germans who know that the outcome of the battle leaves the Fuehrer's army where it was at the beginning, or slightly to the rear. A victorious Nazi army has never failed to push ahead and capitalize its success. There is only one reason why the German troops are not now pushing their thrust at the Russian flank; they have been too badly mauled.

After so exhausting a struggle the Russians would be by no means likely to start another major attack without some delay if they were in danger of running short of supplies. The inference from their new offensive is that the Russian factories are producing well and that convoys from Britain and the United States are getting through to Murmansk and the Persian Gulf.

Cologne

No person will need photographs of the ruins or a catalogue of the wrecked buildings to convince him that Cologne has practically gone out of business as a munitions producing centre and a key transportation point. Three thousand tons of bombs cannot be distributed over even so large a city without leaving it mainly an area of junk. And the raiders were numerous enough to place their bombs where they would do the most military damage.

Cologne is a gateway through which munitions from Nazi plants in France must pass en route to Germany, and through which troops from Germany must pass into occupied France. It is the metropolis of the industrial Rhineland, producing centre of airplane motors, submarine motors, synthetic rubber, war chemicals and other war supplies. The gateway has undoubtedly been all but closed for the time being, and the productive plants destroyed.

The effects of Saturday night's raid must be felt on the Russian front, in the submarine zones, in Egypt. The stoppage of production and the blocking of transportation routes may well be as important as the winning of a major battle by Allied forces on the ground.

The attacking fleet was the largest air force that ever struck at any place on any front. The tonnage of bombs dropped was four times as great as the heaviest load a Nazi raiding force ever hurled upon a British centre. The bombs used were more powerful than any in use a year ago. But there is every reason to suppose still larger armadas, carrying still heavier loads of perhaps even more destructive bombs will visit Germany during the coming weeks, "city by city".

This blow was delivered by Empire air forces alone, with contingents of Polish, Czech and Free French fliers. When the United States airmen join in, as they are to do before long, as many planes may raid some Nazi city every good flying night as went over Cologne on Saturday. The airkrieg has boomeranged. From now on Germany is to get what it gave, in larger doses than it was ever able to administer.

Vice Marshall Harris, who organized the Saturday night attack, said not long ago that if he could send 1,000 planes over Germany every night the military machinery there could be blown out of existence before the end of this year. Cologne proves the point.

It should not take much urging to get the postal authorities to arrange for a daily air mail service to Ft. St. John. Remembering that the Allied objective in Libya is not to acquire more sand hills but to destroy enemy divisions, the battle there seems to be going satisfactorily. Rommel's record shows he is good at extricating his forces from a difficult position and knows when it is time to head for the rear. It is sanguine to expect that his army will be rounded up and liquidated like that of Graziani; and doubtful whether the Allied forces would follow him back to Bengasi again. So long as the fighting can be kept in the present area the desert fights for the Allies, and a war of attrition is probably Auchenleck's choice.

Looking Backward

From The Bulletin Files

1892 — 50 Years Ago

The annual report of the president of the C.P.R. says regarding the Calgary and Edmonton railway: "This line is leased to your company for six years without rental, and your company has the option to purchase it at the end of that time. The negotiations referred to at the last annual meeting looking to its earlier acquisition were discontinued because of the inability of the C. and E. company to comply with the terms named by your directors."

Three-fifths of the wealth of United States is owned by one-twentieth of one per cent of the population. Land in the United States to the extent of 50,900,000 acres is owned in Great Britain, and two-thirds of the land mortgages are also owing there.

Last year the C.P.R. sold 72,647 acres of land at $4.05 an acre.

Hitler Pays Us A Compliment

Axis Flatters Us With Bombs on Centres of Culture

By HAROLD L. WEIR.

There is something so essentially loutish about the pointed German attacks on English cathedrals and other monuments to British culture that the act of bombing Canterbury identifies itself with an order that guzzles beer soup and kills babies.

For the bombing of Canterbury Cathedral, the other night, like the air assaults on York, Chester, Exeter, Bath and other places of purely historic interest is not so much an act of intelligent spite as an act of downright gaucherie.

Harold L. Weir

It is akin to performance of the yokel who props his muddy boots up on a needlepoint-covered stool, not because he intends to be wantonly destructive, but because he is embarrassed in the presence of any kind of magnificence and the only way to cover his awkwardness is to assume a coarse air of familiarity with finnery.

The misfortune of the clown is his inability to admit his ignorance and his fixed notion that only violent action will conceal it.

Herr Hitler is confused by cathedrals, perhaps a little worried by them. So, exactly like the flustered boor who blows his nose in his table napkin as the only endurable alternative to sitting and wondering about it, he applies the formula which barbarians have applied to the mysterious and the unknown and the beautiful since the foundation of the world.

He blows them up.

Lack of Intelligence

And that, of course, quite definitely fixes Hitler's status in the world. He is humanity's prize bumpkin, earth's most objectionable churl.

I frequently think that is the quality which causes us to dislike him and his uncouth following most heartily.

Like the clown, he is so filthily unnecessary. He is not a natural outgrowth of human passions or ambitions or anything but human at all. He is more like an irritating excrescence on humanity's face.

Just as there is no place for the boor in society, so there is no place for the international lout anywhere in the world.

We can tolerate an implacable enemy. We might even have a sneaking admiration for him, as many misguided people have for the devil.

But the lout has no redeeming quality. And his greatest offense is that he is an unmitigated bore.

I believe it is more dangerous to bore a man than to punch him in the nose. A thoroughly bored man is infinitely more menacing than an angry man.

Possibly that will be the end of Hitler, when the whole world, including his own people, become utterly and completely bored with him and his loutish behaviour.

Napoleon lost his grip when he began to bore himself, as Victor Hugo says, to bore God.

Hitler's speeches alone must constitute a frightful trial to the faithful.

Holy Whit commands us to turn the other cheek. I have never yet been able to find any injunction about turning the other ear.

Compliment

Cathedrals, as I say, confuse Hitler's mind because he is incapable of understanding them. But if there should be any among the Germans who wonder what they are doing when such atrocious attacks are ordered (and it would be unfair to classify all Germans with Hitler) they actually pay us a very great compliment.

The Germans who are not louts, and there must be thousands of them, are out to hurt us as much as they possibly can. And if they feel that the cathedrals and the universities and the other centres of civilization are the most sensitive points, they really rate us very highly.

We all have our own definitions of what is the most priceless treasure. As a matter of fact, a man describes himself pretty completely if you can get him to say which of his possessions he loves the best.

Sometimes these disclosures are surprising. The Nazis, for instance, were surprised to find in 1940 that Londoners loved freedom better than life.

This initial misunderstanding seems to have been cleared up. They know us a little better now.

And, after all, it is flattering to be taken for the kind of man who values rare old Gothic churches and the traditions and traditions clustering around these things, more than factories and stores and the other architectural paraphernalia for making money.

No Economic Nationalism For Canada

Would Not Like to See Countenance Trade Defeatism

FROM THE WINNIPEG FREE PRESS

Many sound reasons dictated the gift by Canada to Great Britain of $1,000 millions of goods this year. Its justification lay not only on good war policy, inspiring and invigorating alike to the donor and the recipient, but also in sound economics. Had Canada insisted on payment and had adverse balances on such a scale been allowed to accumulate until the end of what is likely to be a very long war, they would have reached so gigantic a size as to be unmanageable and obviously a deterrent to the resumption of sound trading relations in the post-war period.

These facts were well brought out by Mr. Ilsley in his policy speech in the House of Commons, but it is lamentable that a Liberal Finance Minister of Mr. Ilsley's great ability should have gone on to express what can be described only as the most complete defeatism regarding the resumption of international trading after the war. He said this (page 1553 Hansard):

"Experience has shown that countries will accept these payments in the form of imports only to a limited extent on balance, if at all. To do so of course, exposes their producers to more intense competition from abroad and the excess of imports serves as a deflationary influence which appears to be unwelcome in normal peacetime."

This crude restatement of the doctrine of economic nationalism is an accurate account of the world's policy from 1919 to 1939. Experience in that period points directly to the truth of Mr. Ilsley's remark. The whole world, gripped in those desperate and disastrous years by a fresh access of protectionist nationalism was rushing headlong to destruction like the historic Gadarene swine.

But are we to understand from Mr. Ilsley's speech that the Canadian Government, of which he is so powerful and prominent a member, has decided to accept this madness as the basis of its own post-war policies? We devoutly pray not. Has a government which has made small but steady strides towards even a slight freeing of trade during its years in office since 1935 now in mind that, in the post-war world we are to be forced to listen once again to all those arguments about the evil of exposing our home producers to competition and the deflationary influence of imports which are poisoned and corrupted the minds of a large proportion of the country's electorate? This, surely, is unthinkable.

If we have learned one thing from the experience of which Mr. Ilsley speaks it is that the doctrines he has here described were among the most important factors in breaking down the peace settlement and bringing upon the world the disaster of another war. When that war is over are we stubbornly to set our feet once more on this road that was directly and immediately proved so ruinous?

It would have been preferable had Mr. Ilsley had boldly announced that in the post-war world Canada proposed certainly to accept, and preferably to put forward measures which would restore to the world that measure of freedom of international trade and activity which existed before the war. The only possible basis of a durable peace. There would have been objection from no quarter had Mr. Ilsley accompanied such a statement by some description of the difficulties that stood in the way of such a policy. But what he has here done is to give the impression to Parliament and to Canada that, the moment this war is over, his policy would be to rush once more for those flimsy protectionist hurricane shelters which the war has proved to be wholly useless.

Surely he does not mean that we Canadians propose to den up behind a fiscal policy based on the historic fallacy that we can all get a little more by, each one of us, accepting a little less? Nothing more trade is what is needed. More and more imports. More and more exports. More and more prosperity. More and more acceptance of the fundamental truth that our prosperity depends upon the prosperity of our customers and that sky-high tariffs that block trade are the barriers that in time become the flaming barricades of war.

Writing Marquess Scores A Silly Duke

Demands Bedford Be Jailed For Subversive Ideas He Holds

By THE MARQUESS OF DONEGALL IN THE LONDON SUNDAY DESPATCH

As the Duke of Bedford has not marked his lengthy screed to me "private" I put in any request to me not to quote him. I take it that he has no objection to publicity.

Indeed, I think it quite likely that he welcomes it.

In fairness to the duke it must be said, that he has come proud of his misguided convictions, and, secondly, that his letter shows that he is by no means as mad as I thought him to be. He is a crank; but he is far from being certifiable. This, of course, makes him doubly dangerous.

You may ask how I know that he is not certifiable. I can only tell you that, having spent 15 years of my life reading and answering several hundred letters a week from the great British public, I have developed a sort of sixth sense. I can smell out a lunatic's letter from the other side of the desk while Girl Friday is wading through it.

So you can take it from me that there is no hope of getting the duke pushed into a mental home, which would have been the politest way of shutting him up—in both senses of the phrase. He will have to be dealt with by the less gentle method of 18b of the Defence Regulations.

"He's Mad"

People say to me: "Oh, everybody knows he's mad. Nobody pays any attention to him." To begin with he is not mad. Even if nobody did pay any attention to him—which is unfortunately not the case—it is absolute scandal, with nearly the whole nation working like beavers to save civilization from being put back a thousand years, that the Duke of Bedford should be allowed loose to say and print the things he does.

In his letter, of which I will give you a resume, he admits as much in his paragraph as follows:

"One thing I do agree with you about and that was that it is unfair to imagine that unfortunate old lady and leave me at liberty." He is referring to the recent case at Brighton when a widow got a month in prison for "being the willful sort of defeatism as continually drips off the duke's pen.

He continues: "My turn may come as Morrison grows more vindictive and sees the writing on the wall. But whether it comes or not, and whether I live to see the post-war world or not, people like you are due for such an eyeopener as you have never had in your lives!"

There, my dear duke, you are wrong, because neither I nor "people like me" have any intention of living to see a Britain dominated by Hitler's murderers. But we shall account for quite a few of them before a German bullet puts paid to our account.

Fools' Paradise

Now let us examine what this Peer of the Realm—a legislator, mind you—openly preaches in this nation's greatest hour of peril. He starts off by saying that I am encouraging people to live in the same fools' paradise as myself. He sums up what he alleges to be my attitude as:

"We've lost so much, we'd better lose the lot.

"Let's throw the rest into the melting-pot."

Needless to say, that is not my attitude at all. I try in a small way to increase our efforts for victory and encourage others to do the same by joining the Home Guard or in thousands of other ways, so as to make sure that we do not "lose the lot." It will take prodigious efforts we will certainly pull through. The Duke of Bedford's way is the sure method of "losing the lot."

Here is his way: "Explore the possibilities of a negotiated peace while the Russians are still unbeaten, while the Japs are into Australia and India, and while we still have some real bargaining power. The man who raised the standard of 'can't trust Hitler' objection proves himself utterly lacking in imagination and knowledge of human nature. Lack of imagination' should be written on the tombstone of the British Empire."

Ye Gods and Little Fishes! Has the duke never heard of the French? They thought they would negotiate with Hitler while they still had some bargaining power. Hitler soon had it off them, and now they are virtually slaves. What he has done and will do to the French is, of course, as nothing to what his vengeance on us would be.

Lies, Treachery

How anybody with the duke's amount of sanity can imagine that you can trust Hitler—or any other Nazi—is beyond me. With the example of their Fuehrer's triumphant sprawl across Europe on a carpet of lies, treachery, torture, and poltroonery—to-day's young men and women of Germany worship the gangster philosophy. They were taught at school that spying and double-crossing in the cause of the Fuehrer are noble things.

However, this doesn't worry the duke. He goes right along getting more and more determined—and that the war is already lost. Naturally, he's got the Russians wiped out this summer, and it was American racketeers who were largely responsible for the lack of aircraft at Singapore. Some of these racketeers, he says, hold "key positions" in America.

I won't weary you with the rest of the duke's recital, but the end is good. "I have already dealt with the question of Adolf Hitler. But Hitler does not matter if we play our cards wisely.

"Hitler, one, I confess, defeats me completely. How can he say that a man who has enslaved most of Europe doesn't matter? Anyway, you can't play cards with a cheat. At least, you can, but your chances of winning are pretty poor unless you can out-cheat him.

As he is a more expert cheat than we are ever likely to be, the best method is shooting.

Well, there you are, Mr. Morrison. It will help to put courage into you to take the plunge and lock the duke up, you can have his letter to me.

Now that I come to think of it, there is rather a nasty dig at your distinguished self, contained in it.

That English Accent

LETTER TO EDITOR OF THE TORONTO GLOBE AND MAIL

Sir: Many of your readers must have been amused at the naivete displayed by a correspondent urging the adoption in Canada of "a most decided English accent." She assumes that we are desirous of achieving such, or should be, and assures us that with English voice teachers "we'd soon acquire an accent equal to none."

Whatever the nature of this accent—"equal to none"—being urged upon us, her attitude is reminiscent of every one is out of step but Johnny."

Apparently this lady does not know that one good English friends are internationally noted for slovenly use of their native language which, with comparatively few exceptions, announces their locality. We have plenty of faults, but in the opinion of unbiased foreigners I believe ours are a little less grievous than those of the average Englishman.

As a child I found it difficult to interpret the language of my piano teacher, a Londoner, who called lace "lilen," was afflicted with what is commonly called a "nasal twang" (actually the lack of nasal resonance), and seemed as if she were trying to talk with a hot potato in her mouth.

Later, I had difficulty in conversing with an English professor (of English, mark you!) because he only pronounced the first syllable and swallowed the rest of the word. I learned later that most of the students skipped his lectures—they could relieve hear nor understand him. To a Canadian, with Scottish grandparents, the inability to pronounce the "r" — "neveh" for never—sounds physically defective, while the usually impure vowel sounds, such as "faound" for found, is certainly a dialect.

The flawless Autumn leaf speech of the late Ellen Terry, at one time conceded to be the greatest exponent of the English language, sounded to me similar to that of a cultured Canadian woman.

When we shall have disposed of Hitler and Company, and again turn to such interests as voice culture, I submit that most English-speaking people might benefit, both as to purity of tone and expression, from Italian instruction. C. BALLANTYNE.

Determined To Fight

BY LIEUTENANT GENERAL HUGH A. DRUM, U.S.A., COMMANDING THE FIRST ARMY.

In 1890, when I was a young lieutenant, I was sent to the Philippines. Our ship went via Suez. A case of chicken pox kept us in quarantine at Gibraltar and so Malta was our first stopping place.

Immediately after the ship left New York the men were given four months' pay in gold and this money was burning holes in their pockets.

The men got on good terms with the British garrison in Malta. One way or another there was great fraternization and much Anglo-American mixing up in a satisfactory way. We were, however, horrified to find 35 British soldiers had got on the ship with intention of joining our regiment on the Philippines.

Not all of these were found before the ship sailed. Our men, of course, were all on board in time.

As soon as we got to the Philippines, fighting started against the insurgents and the enemy was startled and disturbed to find that a private, reported to me for gallery against the enemy was one of the British "deserters." Much troubled, I took the matter up with my superiors and eventually secured for him an honorable discharge and a transfer to the American Army. When the fighting was over he joined the Philippine police force and did well there until 1914.

I had kept in touch with him and was hardly surprised when I received an urgent appeal to get him back to British so that he could fight for his country in her hour of need. He fought in the British Army until 1917, again doing well and reaching the rank of captain.

When the United States entered the war I found him in France, ready to transfer back to the American Army that had come to fight there. He succeeded once more in effecting the transfer and he became a major in the American Army. There he again won promotion and fought his last fight, dying in action at Soissons as a lieutenant colonel. Surely an Anglo-American soldier.

Quebec Heater Back

FROM THE BROCKVILLE RECORDER AND TIMES.

The old "Quebec heater"—much maligned but very efficient heating unit peculiar to Eastern Canada for generations — is scheduled to come back into its own this winter, after having been banished during the war years, owing to a recent ruling from Ottawa curtailing the manufacture of stoves to save iron and steel.

Absolutely shorn of gadgets, it performed its work well and that it usually kept heat in the house, but in appearance an eyesore, for it was just an enlarged iron stovepipe about three feet high, lined with firebrick and about two feet in diameter. It boasted of no grate, had a small aperture at the bottom for cleaning out ashes and was fed fuel from the top. It burned everything and anything to a cinder and served its purpose admirably while the wintry blasts toppled the thermometer to 20 or 30 degrees below zero.

Some years ago, manufacturers bent on improving their wares put out some new models. They dressed them up, gave them nickel-plated casings, trimmed them with oil-burning equipment then with nickel-plated fittings, installed grates, which increased efficiency. They even fitted and brought them thoroughly up-to-date. The new stoves sold, they proved a help to the eye of the householder.

But that's all over now, for the Munitions and Supply Department has decreed that no new stoves other than approved models may be manufactured and in the words of Alan H. Williamson, Supplies Controller, "The bride of 1943 may get something of a shock when she sees the new stove. Built for utility rather than for appearance, the new models will be cooking and heating machines and nothing more."

Adding Up

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

The abode of a neighbor of mine (writes a correspondent) has twenty-six downstairs windows and twenty-two upstairs ones. They average approximately one small diamond or square panes each. That makes—as he hitherto points out—the amazing consecutive total of 3,456 panes to be cleaned. Each pane has four corners. That makes 13,824 nice little corners to be de-smudged periodically.

The obvious and inevitable development is the tearing out of all these absurd multi-paned windows and replacement of Olde Worlde quaintness by New World common sense.

Pushing his way through the crowd, the burly policeman found a little man uttering strange noises.

"Wot's all this?" he demanded sternly.

"I ain't doin' no 'arm," protested the little man. "I'm only a bird imitator."

"Ho, bird imitator, are you!" said the constable. "Well, let's see you 'op it!"

Alberta District News In Brief

Determination Of Woman Leads Auto Recovery

RIMBEY.—A young woman's determination to get a gas coupon from a customer before he drove away led to the apprehension here recently of a person driving a stolen car.

The woman, who was looking after her husband's filling station, hailed two passersby —T. B. Wright and Clyde Lambe. They questioned the driver of the car, who had refused to produce a gas coupon. (The coupon issued a motorist bears the license umber of his car).

Becoming suspicious of the man's answers they notified police, who discovered the man was driving a car which had been stolen and for which police were searching.

Two Areas Report Hog Deaths Caused By Mystery Malady

VERMILION.—Dr. Percy Talbot, provincial veterinarian, and Field ...culturalist D. A. Andrew were busy here Saturday investigating a mysterious ailment which has been causing the death of hogs in the Streamstown and Marwayne districts. Visera were sent to Edmonton for analysis.

Directors of the Vermilion fair met Saturday to select a list of judges for the July-August Fair to be submitted for the approval of the provincial department of agriculture. The board voted 25 per cent of net profits from the three-day fair to the Red Cross funds. Arrangements for running and harness racing was left in the hands of the light horse committee.

Bert Engen held the lucky number in the draw made on Friday evening for the afghan raffled by the Rebeccas for war purposes . . . Mrs. S. Millward's pupils presented a musical recital Friday. Proceeds were donated to the Red Cross.

Coronation Will Hold Sports Day

CORONATION. — A committee has been formed by the board of trade to arrange the program for the July 1 sports day. Members are B. Aisanstat, chairman, G. A. Wallace and T. McColm, with W. L. Sharplin as secretary. At its meeting the board also decided to affiliate with the Alberta Board of trade.

This district has donated $134.75 to the China War Victims' Fund as well as $305.07 to the Red Cross. The objective in the Red Cross drive is $1,000 . . . Among the recent United Church Conference appointments were W. B. Leard, who has been appointed to Munson and J. L. Jess to Coronation. They will assume their pulpits on the first Sunday in July . . . Rt. Rev. L. Ralph Sherman, bishop of the Anglican diocese of Edmonton, confirmed six candidates here last week.

—V—

RIMBEY.—Pupils here have collected $16.50 for the "Milk-for-Britain Fund." Milk bottles with white bands and a red slogan were used by the children who were of Grades 4, 5 and 6. Miss Mollie McLees, teacher, directed the campaign and reported only two bottles broken. They were supplied by Harry Palm.

Machine Solves Labor Shortage

RED DEER.—Owing to a shortage of labor sewer trenches this year will be dug by machine instead of by hand. Public Works Foreman J. R. Jones discussed the matter with city council last week and it was decided to use the machine for the work.

The provincial government has requested the city to provide a room for the magistrate's court as the present magistrate's courtroom is to be used for other purposes. City council has offered the use of the city hall. . . . E. G. Johns, chairman of the local Red Cross branch, reports that more than $4,200 has been collected in the city and district to date in the drive and some returns are still to come. Contributions in Red Deer run between $3,700 and $3,800.

Rotarians heard an address by Alex. Calhoun, librarian of the Calgary public library, last week. Mr. Calhoun spoke on Sir Stafford Cripps. Guests included C. H. Snell, chairman, and F. P. Galbraith, members of the local library board.

Kinsmen here are arranging a "Kinsmen Karnival" for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, June 2, and 4. There will be grandstand and sideshow attractions, wheels, bingo, merry-go-round and an airplane ride. The Kinnettes will be in attendance with a Milk-for-Britain Fund booth. . . . Sorensen Bus Lines have opened a new bus terminal in the north section of the Corona Motors building.

With Those In Uniform

RED DEER.—Capt. F. H. Newcombe, of Red Deer, adjutant at the Camrose training centre, has been promoted to that rank from lieutenant. Capt. Newcombe was formerly district agriculturist here.

CORONATION.—Sgt. E. Tiffin, of the Red Deer training centre, and formerly of Coronation, has been promoted to that rank from corporal . . . Mr. and Mrs. Robert Densmore have received word that their son, Brent, now stationed with the air force overseas, has been made an instructor and transferred from the R.C.A.F. to the R.A.F.

VIKING.—Pte. Leslie Lee, son of Mrs. W. J. Lee, writes from overseas that he is receiving mail and parcels regularly and feeling fine . . . The Viking Air Cadet Corps, which has been granted the name Malta Cadet Corps, meets every Monday evening for drill and instruction in signalling, mathematics and first aid . . . The V.V.R. and Civilian Reserve meet for drill and instruction every Sunday under Sgt. J. G. Orton.

Consort More Than Doubles Quota In Drive

CONSORT.—Consort district's Red Cross quota of $700 was more than doubled by end of campaign on May 31. Total amount raised, with seven canvassers yet to hear from, was $1,433.07, which includes $217.15 from Monitor and $121.80 from Naco.

Bruce Ships One Carload Of Salvage

VIKING.—The hamlet of Bruce, 12 miles west of Viking, recently shipped a carload of mixed salvage, scrap iron, steel and rubber, and realized $129.70, $100 of which was donated to the Red Cross drive. So far Bruce has contributed $350 towards the Red Cross campaign.

The salvage committee in Bruce consists of J. W. Stambaugh, president; M. A. Stambaugh, secretary-treasurer; members, Henry Ovens, Albert Dupuis, Jim Savage, Jack Parfett, B. B. Starky. The salvage was brought to town, sorted, broken up, and sent to Edmonton without any expense except freight. The elevator men took turns at using the sledge on the old tractors, plows, machinery, etc., brought in.

Fairview Plans Sports Day For Monday, June 8

FAIRVIEW.—Rev. George T. Pattison and Rev. H. A. Whaley are in charge of the noon parade and children's track and field events in the Fairview sports meet June 8. A powerful loudspeaker will be installed at the grounds to keep various events running smoothly. Committee members are planning a large roast beef barbecue.

There will be no money-making midways. Only charges of the day will be refreshments at the booth, in charge of various organizations, and the dance at night. Something new will be the checker tournament, along with baseball, softball, horseshoes, gymnastics, tug-o-war and any feature that will add zest to this community and district day.

Sportsman Has Trout Weighing Over 5 Pounds

RED DEER.—Hugh McLevin, of Red Deer, on a recent fishing trip to the west country, caught a Loch Leven trout which went several ounces over five pounds. It was one of the biggest fish ever taken from streams in the west country. Mr. McLevin also pulled in some other good ones on the same trip but none came quite up to the five-pounder.

Plan Increase ...tato Output

OTTAWA, June 2.—(CP)—Arrangement to increase the Canadian production of potatoes for sale in the United States were announced by the agriculture department yesterday.

A second arrangement provides for increased output of hog products through a co-ordinated program.

"The potato plan provides for taking such steps as may be appropriate to increase Canadian potato production for sale in the United States either as table stock in the event of a short United States crop, or for manufacture into starch for lend-lease shipment if the crop is large," the department said.

"The second arrangement deals with measures to be taken to increase the ouput of hog products through a more closely co-ordinated program and a paralleling of policies in the two countries."

Officials estimated that under a reduced rate of duty, Canadian potato exports to the United States under quota arrangements may be increased by 9,000,000 or 10,000,000 bushels.

The program for increasing hog production gives support to the present Canadian government policy of increasing the average weight of hogs marketed, removing discounts on heavier weight bacon hogs and raising minimum weight requirements.

12,000 Tons Axis Shipping Is Sunk

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—Four British submarines have sunk 12,000 tons of shipping in the Mediterranean and damaged two other ships, the Admiralty announced last night.

The damaged ships were described as a medium-sized supply vessel "afterwards seen to have been beached in sinking condition" and a large supply ship "seriously damaged."

The number of ships sent to the bottom was not disclosed.

Youth, 16, Admits Murder Of Baby Two-Months-Old

MARQUETTE, Mich., June 2.—(AP)—A 16-year-old youth last night confessed, Sgt. Charles W. Engle of the Michigan state police said, to the slaying Sunday night of two-months-old Gloria Jean Nault at a tavern near Gwinn, where the infant's parents were dancing.

Sgt. Engle said the youth, Ross Heath, a resident of New Swanzey and a former Chicagoan, admitted seizing the baby from an automobile in which it was sleeping.

The baby's body, the skull crushed and the body and limbs severely bruised, was found in the cab of a truck a short distance from the tavern an hour after its disappearance was discovered.

U.S. Casualties

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(AP)—The United States navy department announced its fourth casualty list of the war yesterday, raising the total of dead, wounded and missing to more than 8,500 officers and men.

Restrictions Defended As War Necessity

"This is a war measure. It hurts every one of us. Our job is to see that it is spread over all, so that they can carry it and survive until the war is over and normal trade conditions return," Edgar G. Burton, retail trade administrator for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board declared in addressing members of the Retail Branch of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, in an address Monday evening at the Masonic Temple, on the mechanics of price adjustment.

He was supported in this dictum by his colleague, Robert F. Chisholm, administrator of wholesale trade, who spoke briefly at the close.

A. M. Macdonald, president of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce was in the chair, and among those on the platform or in the audience were Cecil Martin, chairman of the retail section; Walter S. Campbell, regional prices and supply representative for the Board, and George S. Hougham, secretary of the Canadian Retail Federation.

Outlining the conditions of last October when the payroll of Canada rose to 76 per cent above that of 1938, with one-third of all the industrial resources of Canada engaged on war work, Mr. Burton said it was obvious that runaway inflation would follow a national auction for the limited production of consumer goods unless selective control was instituted. The government, as the largest single purchaser of goods and services, was itself vitally affected as a consumer.

DETAILS PROBLEMS

Mr. Burton detailed many of the problems that had to be met in fixing the price ceilings, some of which entailed the payment of subsidies where it was impossible for manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers between them to absorb the increases of cost. Since last December new problems had arisen due to the Pacific situation and the Atlantic sinkings, curtailing imports of tin, sugar, coffee, oil and rubber.

Telling of the work of the Trade Information Bureau and of the simplified practice branch in cutting out "frills", curtailing deliveries, stopping undesirable trade practices, restricting refunds, exchanges and consumer credit, he said the whole purpose of these rulings, and the research being made by industrial surveys, is to keep the ceiling prices for the consumer and at the same time to keep the retailer in business.

Taking blame for ordering the restrictions on men's clothing without adequate press preparation to the public, he said the economies would save cloth enough to make 475,000 soldiers' uniforms and save 20,000,000 needless buttons.

Mr. Burton, himself general manager of the Robert Simpson Coy., Ltd., gave suggestions whereby retailers could help by making economies. Above all he urged them to cease thinking of each other as trade rivals and competitors and seek co-operation with each other and with the wholesale firms with which they do business.

"I'll be a very happy man," he said in conclusion "when the war is over and we can end these measures of control. But in the meantime we're all in the war. Do your duty by accepting willingly these wartime measures which are in the interest of all. That can be made a real contribution to Canada's wartime effort".

INVITES QUESTIONS

Mr. Burton invited questions and many asked. In the course of his answers, which were much appreciated, he intimated that most of the matters referred to would be made the subjects of amendments upon his return to Toronto, for the purpose of making the regulations as effective as possible with the least amount of friction.

Mr. Chisholm added a pertinent note at the end. Speaking as Administrator of Wholesale Trade he said, "Remember, we wholesalers want to keep all the retailers in business. Through the price control measures we are seeking to avert the terrible toll of mercantile failures that followed the World War of 1914-18 with heavy lists of failures in 1919-20 and 21."

Rommel Planned Knockout Blow In First 4 Days

LONDON, June 1.—(CP)—Documents taken from German prisoners show Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's strategy in Libya was to strike a knockout blow "in the first four days of the campaign," a British Broadcasting Corporation correspondent reported last night.

"But our planes and tanks upset that timetable of conquest," the correspondent said in a dispatch from Cairo, "the fighting definitely is not according to the Nazi plan."

American Kittyhawk aircraft, converted into light bombers, were destroying enemy supply vehicles at a rate of 200 a day, the B.B.C. quoted the correspondent as saying.

$3,300 Damages Asked In Blast Of Wart Remover

CALGARY, June 2.—(CP)—Claiming she was injured when a bottle of wart remover purchased at a drug store exploded, Mrs. Margaret Hehn started suit for $3,300 damages against Mr. Harry in supreme court yesterday before Mr. Justice S. J. Shepherd.

The woman said when she bought the medicine, she signed a "poison book" in the store. As she was about to remove the cork from the bottle, the contents exploded and she was burned. The liquid stained walls and ceiling at her home, and burned into the dress she was wearing.

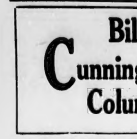
Bill Cunningham's Column



COL. STENGEL PHILOSOPHIZES ON HOW TO THOW A BASEBALL

NEW YORK, June 2—You'd never think such passing matters as where a fellow's fingers happen to land when he clutches a baseball, or how many fingers he has wrapped around the missile when he throws, could make the difference between a tryout and a career, a scatter-arm and a star. It seems, however, that that's the way it is. The matter was thoroughly aired the other afternoon at a game between the Braves and the Dodgers.

Col. Casey Stengel, in the virginal white flannel of the home side, hitched around on the broad bench which had been thoughtfully covered with an O.D. blanket to cut down on the laundry bill. Col. Stengel is rarely known by that title. In fact, he may have forgotten that he possesses it.

But Mr. Stengel was duly commissioned along with Miss Mae West; the baby movie star, Shirley Temple, and some 10,000 others by a former governor of Kentucky as one of that distinguished group of officers known as Kentucky Colonels. Few, if any, ever heard a shot. Most of them took one but never through sights, or by benefit of trigger.

AS USUAL THE COLONEL COMES UP WITH A BEAUT

The honor took Mr. Stengel completely by surprise, but, never at a loss oratorically, his speech of acceptance was a classic.

"Boys," said he, "I don't know what I have done to deserve this signal honor. Perhaps it is bestowed in recognition of my services to the great state of Kentucky in having consumed so much of one of its most famous products. But I shall wear the uniform with dignity and pride. By the way, what's the shoulder insignia, juley leaves?"

This was during Mr. Stengel's indenture with Brooklyn. Both Brooklyn and Mr. Stengel have since reformed.

But here the Colonel sat hitching around on his blanket watching his new team warm up to take on his old, and he was waxing even poetic. He reached clear back into The Passionate Pilgrim, which is a mental retreat to 1871 and an opus by Henry James and came up with a quotation neatly and off-handedly.

"Crabbed age and youth cannot live together," said the Col., quoting brilliantly, "or so they say, but they were not referring to this here ball club." The Col. was harking back to a pronouncement of his during the spring seminar down in Sanford.

OKAY IN FIELDING BUT IT'S HIS TH'OW'N

"I have got me," said the Col. on that occasion, "an old guy and a young guy for every position. That's as near a way as I can figure how to baseball a war. If the army wants a young 'un, I'll still have me a grandpap. It may be a funny looking outfit, but I'll always have me nine men.

"Now there," said the Col., as the sensationally hitting young third baseman, Manny Fernandez, dug a flip out of the sand and threw it so high that the first baseman only tagged it in passing, "there, I repeat, is a guy who's doing something I can't figure. He's all right in his fielding, but it's his th'oin'. He th'oins another one laid on me yesterday. And he just th'oined that one high. And there—you see—he th'oined that one low."

George Kelley had rapped another one straight at the young man, and he'd rifled the repeater across the diamond with a sharp sinker effect.

"All I can figure," said the Col, "is that he gets three fingers on the ball. But how to stop him, I can't figure."

"Why don't you tape two of 'em together," some volunteer down the bench suggested.

SHOWS HOW TO THROW FAMOUS KNUCKLE BALL

"Now there's an idea," the able monologist agreed, but he had hitched himself off the bend and poked his arms elbow deep in the brown canvas bag that held the day's baseballs. He drew one forth and placed it on the bench, and then the argument started.

"This," he said, "is the way you hold a baseball when you th'o' it," and he plumbed his bespatulate paw over it, clutching it with two fingers full length over the top of it, his thumb underneath, and the curve of the fourth finger supporting it on the other side.

"Wait a minute," said Il Schnozzola Lombardi, "where've you got your knuckle?"

"Which knuckle?" inquired the Col.

"Your thumb knuckle," said Il Schnozzola.

"Why there, of course," said the Col. waving the missile as if about to deliver it.

"You've got your thumb turned under," said a sports writer.

"I have not," said the Col. "That's the way I always thew a ball, and if I do say so, and waiving all claims to modesty, I could th'o' a baseball."

JIM TOBIN GETS INTO THE ARGUMENT

"The ball is resting on your thumb knuckle," the stubborn sports writer insisted, "and I do not believe anybody can throw a ball in from the outfield that way."

Then the argument waxed, with all hands smiling. Mr. James Tobin said he knew two guys on the Coast, an Oakland shortstop named Ernie DeVivera and a pitcher named Wes Willie Ludolf, who always threw with that knuckle turned under, more or less shooting the ball off the thumb joint. They had great arms, too, he insisted.

Gene Mack, the cartoonist, said Jimmy Dykes always threw that way and that there wasn't a better arm, nor a surer aim than his. Tobin said Chief Bender held his curve ball that way, and somebody else declared that both Chandler and Blanton hold the ball that way on some pitches and serve the ball with a straight forward and downward snap of the arm.

"That looks too tough on elbows to me," said Tobin. "Chandler's had elbow trouble."

AND NOW COMES ALONG THREE-FINGERED FERNANDEZ

"This is the way to hold it," Col. Stengel insisted, but it was noticeable that he'd straightened that thumb out considerably.

"But back to Fernandez?" your correspondent asked him.

"Maybe it's the angle that still bothers him a little," he said, Fernandez until this year having been a shortstop, "but he grabs that ball and seems to th'o' it from the hollow of the hand. I don't know about his thumb. How's a fellow going to see? But instead of two fingers, he gets three over the top of the ball. I'm sure of that. And that aids his shot. He sort of pushes the ball over there, instead of shooting it from a gun."

And anybody can help the Col. with this problem, one gathered that the service will be welcome. He's apparently got himself one of the great kid third basemen of several seasons, if the boy can only learn to control that long shot to first. You've heard of Three-Fingered Brown. Here's Three-Fingered Fernandez.

Motorboat Body Recalls Trophies

NEW YORK, June 2—American Power Boat Association voted to recall all challenge trophies controlled by it and affiliated groups from competition for the duration of the war.

Numbering 72 and including such a historic one as the Gold Cup, the trophies will be put back in circulation when motorboat racing is resumed on a normal basis. Present holders will have first chance at them.

Bambino Overshadowed Lou

Nobody In Sight Yet To Take The Place Of Lou Gehrig

NEW YORK, June 2—(AP)—It was just a year ago today that the big guy left us, and there isn't even the shadow of anyone who might take his place on the horizon.

Now will there ever be, Baseball produces only one Lou Gehrig, as it produces only one Ty Cobb, or Babe Ruth, or one of a few other individuals whose niche is peculiarly their own.

It took tragic illness, and finally, death, to remove him from the shadow of the flamboyant Babe Ruth in which the Bronx iron man walked uncomplainingly during many of his glory years.

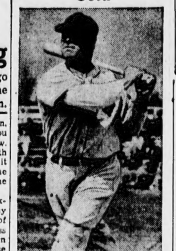
For years he was just the No. 2 man. Ruth had caught the crowd's fancy.

Lou Gehrig was just the old reliable who followed the Bambino in the batting order. The fans would roar acclaim as Ruth lifted one of his towering flies for a home run, and before the roar had faded Lou might more than match the blow. Yet it was so business-like with him, so matter of fact, that it aroused only a vocal ripple. One was a Babe Ruth hogie run. The other just a home run.

We can see him yet, calmly talking in the dugout that fateful day when the sports world learned of the shadow that had fallen across his life. He must have known then it was the end, but he flashed those nice teeth in a smile and remarked philosophically:

"We must take the bitter with the sweet. If this is the end, I can take it."

Sold



Jimmy Foxx, famous homerun hitter, is again on the move, but this time he leaves the American League, for the Chicago Cubs have purchased him. "Double X" started his major baseball career with Philadelphia Athletics, with whom he made his reputation as a long-distance clouter, being later sold to Boston Red Sox.

Famous Slugger Is Sold To Cubs

BOSTON, June 2—(AP)—Jimmy Foxx, now crowding 35 but up to a year ago one of baseball's greatest right-handed sluggers, Monday was waived out of the American League by Boston Red Sox and sold outright to Chicago Cubs, managed by Jimmy Wilson, his old friend and Philadelphia neighbor.

The passing of Foxx, known by fandom as "Double X" and most affectionately by teammates and rivals as "The Beast," came as no surprise.

Baseball knew he was just about washed up with the Red Sox last season, especially after Owner Tom Yawkey, his sincere admirer, tried vainly to land him the managership of Cleveland Indians.

Until recently, Foxx appeared destined to rejoin Philadelphia Athletics, the major league club he broke in with 18 years ago when, fresh from a Maryland farm, he launched one of the greatest first-basing careers in modern baseball.

INJURED LAST WEEK

But he suffered a fractured rib during batting practice in the Yankee Stadium last week, with the result that Connie Mack, his first baseball boss, lost interest in taking him in a trade that, the Red Sox hoped, would get them Frankie Hayes, a much-needed topflight catcher who Sunday was traded to St. Louis Browns.

It is likely that Wilson figures Foxx, who has a lifetime batting average of .322 and a current one of .274, will provide his sixth-place National League club with some much-needed batting power, most likely in pinch-hitting roles.

Foxx, who broke into professional baseball at the tender age of 14 with the Easton club in the Eastern Shore League, joined the Athletics as a catcher the following year. He was farmed out to Providence, then in the International League, but was recalled at the end of the season. He played with the Athletics from 1926 to 1935 and starred on three of their pennant winning clubs.

STARTED AS CATCHER

Mack tried him out behind the plate and at third base before making him the Athletics' regular first baseman in 1929. Foxx hit his peak for the Athletics in 1932, when he batted his all-time high of .364 and hit some 58 home runs, only two less than Babe Ruth's top and major league record for a right-handed slugger.

Foxx was purchased by the Red Sox in 1935, along with Pitcher Jimmy Marcum for two players and a reported $150,000. That was the last major deal Yawkey made with Mack, into whose lap the Boston owner dropped almost $500,000 in his fruitless attempt to build a pennant-winning team.

Three times during his sojourn in the American League, Foxx was voted its most valuable player, in 1932, 1933 and 1938.

NATIONAL LEAGUE WANING STARS' HAVEN

NEW YORK, June 2—(AP)—Since Boston Braves provided a temporary haven for Babe Ruth in 1935 many waning stars in the junior circuit have found refuge in the National League—among them Al Simmons, Schoolboy Rowe, Johnny Allen, Fred "Dixie" Walker, Gerald Walker, Rollie Hemsley, Bill Werber, Zeke Bonura, Debs Garms, Bump Hadley, Monte Pearson and Ellsworth "Babe" Dahlgren.

Foxx is the fourth prominent American Leaguer to be taken by a National League club this season.

Yanofsky Concludes Tour

Young Chess Wizard Loses Only Eight Out Of 440 Games

HALIFAX, June 2—(CP)—Winding up a cross-country tour, Abe Yanofsky of Winnipeg, Canada's 18-year-old chess champion, gained 22 victories and one draw in a 23-board simultaneous chess match at the Bluenose Chess club here Monday night.

Henri Stroud, of Dartmouth, N.S., club president, gained the draw. A prize for the strongest opposition went to K. Quincy, Royal Navy rating, who holds the Lincolnshire junior championship.

The Winnipeg medical student won 113 of 115 games in the Maritime, P. Brunet of Montreal, a member of the R.C.A.F., gaining a draw at Moncton, N.B., last week. The champion's tour took him to 18 cities from Edmonton to Halifax and the final score showed he lost only eight of 440 games played.

The tour was sponsored by the Canadian Chess Federation in an effort to stimulate interest in the game.

Yanofsky has hopes of competing in the United States open meet at Dallas, Texas, in July.

Harridge Plans To Raise $375,000

CHICAGO, June 2. — (AP) — President Will Harridge, of the American League said last night that three double headers, all to be played on Sunday, Aug. 2, plus a night game at Chicago, had been arranged to bolster the League's drive to raise funds for Army and Navy relief.

Harridge has set the League's goal at $375,000. The double-headers will find St. Louis at Detroit, Boston at Philadelphia and Washington at New York.

Mrs. Grace Comiskey, president of Chicago White Sox, has agreed to play the Chicago-Cleveland game of July 2 at night instead of the afternoon.

"Old Timers" Hold Initial Workout At Renfrew Park

Several of the "Old Timers" who are to perform in Cosmopolitan Club cigarette fund against the Dodgers of the senior league on June 20, arranged to find their way back to Renfrew Park for a workout last night.

Although some of the boys may be just a trifle stiff today, they looked pretty good in the four or five innings they were cavorting around at Renfrew and with a few more practices, before the big game should be able to go the route all right.

Norman Dodge, Verne Rose and Earl Davidson, who incidentally can throw from either side, each did some pitching and no breakages were reported. In fact it is not so very long since these boys were right in the thick of it and they should have very little trouble rounding into shape.

Ed. McHugh was back behind the plate last night, Phil Horne at first, Jack Davidson, of Woodward's was at second, Jack Sirkey looked after things at short and Hugh John MacDonald guarded the same old difficult corner.

L. A. Duhamel, Emil Martell, Louis McGillis and George Dame along with several others were also on the job.

Claire Chubb, of the Hudson's Bay has promised to be out for the next practice and Lloyd McIntyre is also getting back into harness once more.

It is suspected that some of the boys may be doing just a little tuning up in the back yard before showing up at an official workout.

In the meantime the Cosmopolitan Club committee is going full steam ahead with plans for the game and it has been announced that Wing Commander Webber, of the Manning Depot, Col. E. Rown, M.M., E.D., Edmonton area commandant and Lieut. Crawford, R.C.N.V.R. will take part in the ceremony to immediately precede the game.

Woodbine Races Well Patronized

TORONTO, June 2. — (BUP) — They're still having race meets in England, by public demand. Now, it appears as if the Canadian public feels the same way about racing—they want it, war or no war.

That was proven by the attendance figures at the meet just closed at Toronto's Woodbine layout.

The turnstiles clicked merrily all week. And it was estimated that more than two million dollars passed through the mutuel machines.

Besides netting a nice plum for the Ontario Jockey Club, this meant that the federal government will have a nice take for the war effort.

Everybody in Toronto racing circles is happy about it—and now, they're waiting to see how the Thornecliffe track makes out.

Junior Baseball Tonight

Cubs To Play Maple Leafs

EDMONTON Junior Baseball League swings into action at Renfrew Park again tonight with the Cubs and Maple Leafs doing the honors. The game will start at 7 o'clock.

So far only two of the four teams in the junior loop have performed this season, the Canadians defeating Henry Singer's squad 6-2 in a real battle in the opener on May 25.

Maple Leafs have not announced their starting lineup but, according to officials of the club, the team is stronger than last year and there is a surplus of material to draw from.

Bill McKinnon, manager of the Cubs, will probably nominate Guy Hixon as his starting chucker. Bill claims that his pitching staff, the other two members of which are Elmer Thomas and Charlie Brandt, is as strong as any in the league.

The Cubs will again have Len Maher at second, Ira Shanis at short and Andy Kowalchuk at third. These boys all played in the league last season and handled themselves well.

Bill Clark at first along with Les Caine and Nick Kowalchuk in the outfield are three of the newcomers on the Cubs' lineup.

Daniel Ties With Saidler For High In Garrison Shoot

F. R. Daniel and J. Saidler tied for top marksman with a score of 102 each at Sunday's regular shoot of the Edmonton Garrison Rifle Association at Winterburn range.

L. R. Gorham had sole possession of second place with 100, while third position was held jointly by Col. P. E. Bowen and L. Peel with 97.

A. M. Allan, Col. P. E. Bowen, F. R. Daniel, L. R. Gorham, C. J. Morison, L. Peel, J. Saidler and L. E. Wize all had possibles at the 200 yard range.

J. Saidler had the only perfect score at 300 yards and F. R. Daniel and Littlejohn led at the 600 with 33 each.

Following are the results:

Cincinnati Reds, who had great success with Werber after buying him from Philadelphia Athletics, acquired Catcher Rollie Hemsley and Outfielder Gerald Walker during the winter but neither has been able to hold a regular job.

Brooklyn Dodgers obtained Rowe from Detroit last month and have used him both as a relief pitcher and as a pinch hitter with indifferent results.

Girls' Sports Outlook

By SUSIE Q

Anent our comment last week as to getting news out of a stone comes word of Myrtle MacGowan, women's sport writer of Montreal, while on her way to the office attempted to pass a young man carrying a piece of lumber, who suddenly turned and the lumber struck her head. Later she collapsed at the office and was taken to hospital where she remained for several days, and now reminiscences on a big bump and her seeing all kinds of editions of the Star.

And girl softball players will please remember "safety first" which comes to our mind in reading of another broken leg from a game played in the Castor district.

Then we have the story of a girl onlooker in a Peace River softball game who remarked: "That girl in the centre can certainly throw a good ball for she hits those sticks every time!" Which will compare with an Edmonton girl who a few years ago asked the manager of a team at a practice if she might try out? The manager asked her to pitch a few balls on trial and suddenly she complained to him that the girl with the bat would not hold it still so that she could hit it. Later she admitted that she thought that was what the pitcher was supposed to do. And still later in other seasons that same girl was considered a valuable outfielder by her team, for she learned a lot about the game.

Have you ever noticed the service stripes of some public officials wearing uniforms? A Toronto firm, which has sponsored softball for several years, now has its players outfitted with a star on their sleeves for each year they have been on that team. Several of the girls have five and six stars.

While at a hair dressing room the other day, conversation hit on a report that an oldtime manager was proposing to try to arrange for an exhibition ball game of the girls who played some ten to fifteen years ago as a sort of re-union celebration. This was proposed last year but his arrangements did not go quite far enough at that time. The report had it that he had some fifty members in interview, though he hardly expected that all of them would care to now play a full nine inning game.

Read a story of the lady in Chicago who paid $500.00 for the privilege of kissing or being kissed by Cary Grant of film fame at a war charity per...ance in that city. We wondered if the Kinsmen of Edmonton missed something as to their auction this week? And it also reminded us of that old American story: "You to your fancy and I to my Nancy," as the old woman remarked as she kissed her prize cow.

As to a query about the winter basketball, we inquired and found out that the Y.W.C.A. girls team with whom Edith Mills, formerly with the Edmonton Gradettes, plays, won the Alf Blyth trophy for the season. The Bisellites, who had it the previous season, had so many girls in their club that they formed two teams last winter and neither lineup was quite strong enough for the "Y" opposition.

Never too old to learn something, we met a young girl who told us of some girls at her school who could jump over a bar 19 holes high. We asked how many feet and inches. She did not know, but there were holes in the standards every so often. This was a new measuring scheme to our point of view, and maybe peculiar to Edmonton school ideas.

English schoolgirl war guests in some of the eastern cities are staging exhibitions of Lacrosse—Canada's supposed national game which is not played in the prairie west but little. In practically every girls' school in the Motherland, lacrosse figures prominently. These games seem to meet with considerable support in attendance numbers and in the collections for war services.

These are the days of school district track and field meets, but comment is limited on our part as we cannot seem to get at the times and distances of which there is a great variety of events. Some meets have 50 yards, some 60 and some 75 in the races and we find variance even in the shuttle distances, with some reports giving them the name of relays. Calgary is having a high school meet this week but as to Edmonton, there is not even an echo. Vancouver and Winnipeg had theirs last week.

EXPLANATION OF TODAY'S CARTOON

THE MIRACLE OF THE RING: Last year Mrs. Vial of Greytown, Natal, baked 150 cakes to send to the army abroad. After the cakes were baked, she missed her wedding ring. She surmised that the ring would be in one of the cakes, but since she could not open 150 cakes, the cakes were shipped and a note enclosed with each, requesting the finder to return the ring. In December, 1941, she received a letter from her son, Sergeant Ronnie Vial, saying that the ring was found in one of the cakes which was delivered to him by accident.

Mickey Owen Exception To Rule

Most Baseball Players Always Ready With Alibi

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK, June 2.—No other class of athlete bobs up with alibis as readily as baseball players. That is what made Mickey Owen so unusual when Hugh Casey's inside pitch, which would have given Brooklyn a second victory in the world series, slithered off the but of his glove.

It was an epic of the diamond when the catcher said, simply: "I missed the ball."

Once when a ball went between Sinclair Jolley's legs as the White Sox outfielder squinted into the sun, he explained that he lost it in the glare, added that he never could play the sun field.

Many a fine ball player offers excuses when there is no need for them.

Sam Rice, the grand Washington outfielder of years back, was this type. Once Rice forgot to close the gate, as the ball players say, and a well-hit ball to right field got through him with the lying run on second and the winning run on first.

THE SPITTER BROKE

Bucky Harris, then playing second base, dashed out into short right field and shouted: "To the plate! To the plate!"

Rice picked up the ball, whirled and threw as Harris turned and squatted to watch the play at the plate. The ball struck Harris on the back of the head.

"Why," Harris asked Rice, after he had cooled off in the clubhouse, "don't you throw that ball to the plate?"

"I did throw it to the plate," replied Sam.

"Then, tell me," came back Harris, "if you intended that ball for the plate, how come it nearly knocked my head off?"

"It was this way, Bucky," explained Rice. "Those fans in the right field bleachers spit. When I got hold of the ball, it was covered with spit. And the spitter broke!"

ARE FEW EXCEPTIONS

They still talk of George Selkirk telling Joe McCarthy that he picked up a stiff neck standing in front of a fan at a bar in St. Louis.

Ball players, to hear them tell it, generally leave an air-cooled Pullman car with colds in their arms, shoulders and necks.

Phil Rizzuto is the latest Yankee to frankly state that his cold was his own fault, traceable to his sitting on the Yankee Stadium grass while perspiring.

But Mickey Owen, Twink Selkirk and Little Scooter Rizzuto are exceptions.

The great majority of ball players, regardless of how much ability they possess, don't believe in taking the blame for anything that may happen to them.

Sport Shorts From Britain

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—A "dead" horse won the Crawfurd handicap at Newmarket a few days ago.

The racer, Sig Edward, was seized with an illness a few months ago and pronounced dead when a veterinary found no signs of pulse or heartbeat.

Trainer Chubb Leach was heartbroken. He stayed throughout the night in the boxstall with the animal and "nearly passed away" when it stirred, lifted its head, then rose to its feet.

"What should I give my dead horse to eat?" Leach asked when the veterinary returned to make arrangements for disposing of the carcass.

The Duchess of Norfolk's hobby is riding—but not after the fox. She prefers exercising racehorses and turns jockey to gallop six-year-old Buxton over a stiff mile at Newmarket in the early hours.

Pity Ireland's racing ponies. Already threatened by an oat famine, their feedboxes shortly may be just as bare as that famous cupboard because hay, once considered expensive at $25 a ton, has jumped from $45 to $55.

A competitor with an artificial arm took part in a recent bowling tournament in London. After the bout an objection was registered by his opponent who said he disliked being slugged with a piece of wood.

At a meeting of referees and judges of the Amateur Boxing Association the chairman said that if he had been named to referee the bout he would have ordered the artificial-arm boxer from the ring.

Listen to this from a London sport columnist:

"I was told that United States' army baseball experts have been attracting appreciative crowds of spectators in the London parks with warming-up practices. The powerful and accurate throwing and clever catching with the big mitts in the left hand of these enthusiasts is said, to be well worth watching."

Leaders Win 39 Of Last 49 Games

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, June 2—(AP)—This year the major league clubs hoped for a couple of close pennant races. So what did they get? A pair of runaways by the same teams that triumphed last year.

Monday, as both the major loops idled away an open date preparatory to another round of east-west scrapping, New York Yankees were eight games ahead of the nearest rival in the American league and Brooklyn Dodgers were six in front in the National League.

Furthermore, the first quarter of the season has produced not the faintest threat toward either leader.

The Yankees were more or less conceded this year's pennant, their sixth in seven years, but many observers figured that the rest of the American League would be able to make a race at least till July 4.

The Yanks are showing up their foes in spite of themselves. They have won 21 of their last 25 games without ever getting up steam and look capable of winning by any margin they please.

As the standings indicate, Detroit Tigers appear the strongest of the other clubs. Manager Del Baker has been rebuilding with youngsters and has received excellent pitching. In addition, Rudy York, the big Cherokee first baseman, is having a banner season.

Brooklyn's supremacy in the National League rivals the domination of the Yankees over the junior circuit. The Dodgers have won 18 of their last 24 games and they have beaten Boston Braves, the third place club, eight times this year without a defeat.

St. Louis Cardinals are having trouble again this season with injuries to key men. Johnny Hopp was not available for weeks because of an injured thumb and now Stan Musial has been laid up by a bad ankle sprain.

Starting today the Eastern clubs of the National League will invade the west and the western clubs of the American League will make another circuit of the east.

In the previous intersectional skirmishing the Yanks won 11 and lost six and the Dodgers won 12 against six defeats.

Sports . . . . Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP)—Study in contrasts—or is it? . . . Britain's wartime sport has become a week-end affair with players and fans engaged in war work through the week. . . . Saturday two cup final soccer games drew 120,000 fans. . . . In the United States baseball is going on a business-as-usual basis and not getting rich from week-day customers. . . . Saturday and Sunday major league doubleheaders drew 202,000. . . . Looks as if the athletes might as well save their efforts for occasions when fans are willing and able to turn out. . . . As further proof, five big horse tracks drew 170,000 fans Saturday.

Two of the first families of fistiana will be joined, appropriately enough, right on Jacobs Beach June 28 when Pte. Adam Pianga of Camp Upton and Jean Monteith of Detroit will be married. . . . Jean is the daughter of Promoter Scotty Monteith, once manager of Johnny Dundee, and Pte. Pianga is, of course, Young Kid McCoy, the crack welterweight. . .

When Don White, former San Francisco ball player, went to join the Navy, they found his eyes so bad he was given extra time and special treatments to get by the test. . . . Don was hitting only .463 for the Seals at the time.

Gov't Position On Conscription Much Improved

pose to consult Parliament again before passing the conscription order-in-council there is good reason to believe that the cabinet will hold together. Hon. Louis St. Laurent is reported to be willing to have the order passed before the approval of Parliament is sought.

TENSION LESSENED

Meantime, of course, the sharp increase in recruiting is tending to lessen the tension on Parliament Hill. The army program calls for between 90,000 and 100,000 men by March 31, 1943.

The period from January to May, inclusive, has produced more than 50,000 active service recruits, and if the present rate of enlistment continues, the full quota will be reached in August.

This, however, takes no account of developments in Europe which might bring the Canadian army into action and greatly increase the demand for men. But, on the other hand, any demand of this kind would greatly simplify the political problem of imposing conscription.

With respect to service in Alaska, Newfoundland, etc., it is thought probable that Mr. King will announce that the National Resources Mobilization Act will be amended forthwith to include the North American continent in what has hitherto been defined as the area of home defence. This would mean that men called for service could be used anywhere on the continent.

President Of Mexico Signs Order For War

MEXICO CITY, June 2.—(AP) —President Avila Camacho signed the declaration last night putting Mexico at war against Germany, Japan and Italy.

The only remaining formality was the publication of the war declaration today in the Official Gazette.

With the first war declaration in Mexican history, this country became the 27th of the United Nations aligned against the Axis.

SPECIAL POWERS

The president, acting with the unanimous approval of a special session of congress, also signed a batch of bills granting him extraordinary powers to mobilize the resources and manpower of the nation.

Mexico's entry into the war was accelerated by the sinking of two Mexican ships by Axis torpedoes and was definitely decided upon when the Axis bluntly refused even to receive the Mexican protest over the first sinking, off the coast of Florida.

DECLARATION SERVED

Notice of the war declaration was served on the Axis last night through Sweden, acting for Germany, through Switzerland for Japan, through Portugal for Italy.

The army's general staff was assembled, and troops, sailors and marines already were pouring into positions on the Pacific and Gulf coasts.

leck, commander in chief of the British Middle Eastern forces, had informed the government that "fierce fighting still is proceeding; the battle is by no means over."

Mr. Churchill read a statement by Gen. Auchinleck saying the continuous fighting in Libya had been "of the highest order" and emphasizing the "excellent performance" of American tanks with which the General said "all users are well pleased."

The statement added that the new British heavy anti-tank gun has proved a tremendous asset.

British sources estimated 50 per cent or more of the Axis' armored formations in advanced areas of the Libyan battle have been destroyed.

They give the credit to skilful British gunners and the quality of their tanks, particularly new 28-ton land cruisers and said two German armored divisions and the Italian Ariete division had been crippled.

Noted Poplar Lake Resident Is Dead

One of the oldest surviving pioneers of the Edmonton district, John Carnegie of Poplar Lake, about 11 miles north of Edmonton, died in a city hospital Monday. He was 87 years old. He had been ill for two weeks.

Born in Scotland, he came to the United States and then to southern Alberta in 1885. In 1891 he began homesteading in the Edmonton district. For eight years he was section foreman for the C.P.R., and then returned to farming on the same property that he had resided on until his death. He was a member of the Northern Alberta Pioneers and Old Timers' Association.

He is survived by four sons and eight daughters. Funeral arrangements will be announced later by Howard and McBride.

Commando Assault Tactics Feature Red Deer Display

Bulletin Staff Reporter

RED DEER, June 2. — To an ear-splitting accompaniment of exploding thunder flashes and flashing Verey lights, a company of face-blackened, yelling "commandos" charged behind a smoke screen to give several hundred startled spectators a realistic demonstration of the kind of war that will bring Nazi Germany to her knees, at the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps training centre at Red Deer Monday afternoon.

The "Commando" raid was the feature spectacle during a public military "show" staged by about 500 specially trained troops at the Red Deer Centre, second largest R.C.A.S.C. training centre in Canada and by far the largest in western Canada.

Another highlight of the occasion was presentation of certificates as First Lieutenants to 17 qualifying officers.

The certificates were presented by Lt.-Col. J. J. Burton-Willison V.D., Commanding Officer at the training centre.

BULLETIN CARRIER

Lieut. J. F. Bryant, former Edmonton swimming star, and a Bulletin carrier boy about 12 years ago, was among the 17 who received certificates. Lieut. J. R. Armitage, of Calgary, whose wife now lives at 11545 87 street, enlisted as a private and served as a supply clerk in the office at No. 13A district depot in Edmonton before taking an officer's training course at Gordon Head.

Lieut. Bryant formerly lived at 9108 81 avenue and attended Queen Alex and Strathcona high schools. He was employed as a swimming instructor at city pools prior to enlisting.

The graduates were "played forward" at slow march by the training centre band before the table behind which the Commanding Officer stood.

Lt.-Col. Burton-Willison advised the young officers to look upon their additional shoulder stars as greatly increased responsibility.

He told the class they would retain the respect of their men if they treated them fairly at all times and if they were sufficiently efficient in their work at all times.

"You can only train men if you keep fit and are trained yourselves. You must know your job," the Commanding Officer stated.

Lieut. F. M. Winch, of Orillia, Ont., was forced to accept his certificate from an invalid's chair, as he recently suffered a broken leg in a motorcycle mishap, at the training centre.

SMART SQUAD

Despite the fact it is an army service corps training centre, where the accent is not expected to be placed on parade ground drill, the troops who marched past their commanding officer in full battle array, presented as smart an appearance as any precision squad from a crack infantry unit.

There was a snap and smartness in their rifle drill and the marching was flawless to the stirring music of the band under the direction of Sgt. Maj. W. E. Haywood.

Maj. R. H. Merryweather was the officer in command of the parade.

Prior to the presentation of certificates, there was a pageant of military progress across the parade ground.

Through a public address system an announcer explained the status of each group that paraded past where the spectators were seated.

First came green recruits, in new uniforms, with no equipment. Next were trained troops with some battle equipment. These were followed by trained men who donned gas masks quickly as they marched.

Then came the "men from Mars," hideous in gas masks and long shroud-like yellow slickers. A group in gymnasium shorts followed, going through exercises as they marched.

These were followed by successive groups with Bren guns and anti-tank guns, then squads of motor-cyclists and then a score of huge armored trucks rumbled by.

COMMANDO DISPLAY

In the Commando display, smoke pots belched forth a cloud of heavy yellow smoke. Then came showers of thunder flashes, hurled by the attackers from behind the smoke screen. Verey lights sent multi-colored rockets hissing across the parade ground before the advancing Commandos. Then the face-blackened troops, crouched close to the ground, moved toward their objective in a series of short, lightning dashes.

The "grenades" were hurled in showers.

Branches and leaves adorned the steel helmets of the "Commandos," who were led by an officer wielding a wicked-appearing machette.

Finally, with wild shouts and a final shower of thunderflashes, the Commandos made an irresistible charge on their objective and the raid was over.

OFFICERS GRADUATE

The spectators applauded the show vigorously.

The 17 graduating officers had completed 12 weeks training at Gordon Head and eight weeks at Red Deer, prior to receiving their certificates. They will now continue intensive training for an additional three months before being posted to other units.

Capt. A. W. Edwards was in charge of the graduating class on parade Monday.

The ceremony of presentation and the military demonstrations were witnessed by several hundred invited guests, included in which were relatives of many of the graduating officers.

Mayor E. S. Hogg of Red Deer and other leading citizens were also on hand.

Lieut. Ralph Wilson, Public Relations Officer at M.D. 13, Regimental Sergeant Major Fred Purkiss of the Edmonton Garrison and newspapermen from Calgary and Edmonton were also in attendance.

GRADUATES NAMED

Following are the graduating lieutenants: R. A. D. Kelly, Winnipeg; J. Rayson, Winnipeg, A. Campbell, Montreal; J. F. Bryant, Edmonton; G. S. Wright, Vancouver; J. R. Armitage, Calgary; R. M. McLeod, Toronto; A. J. MacRae, Vancouver; R. A. Simpson, Victoria; N. T. Gray, Vancouver; J. B. Rutledge, Vancouver; W. W. Glover, Regina; H. A. Swift, Winnipeg; A. E. Frisby, Vancouver; G. R. Rathbone, Toronto; A. J. Appleby, Saskatoon and F. M. Winch, Orillia.

Lull In Fight On Russ Front Now Revealed

MOSCOW, June 2.—(AP)—The Soviet government has announced a three-to-one edge in destruction of planes on the German-Russian front in the period from May 24 to May 30 and implied a lull in fighting aground yesterday with the statement "no essential change took place."

"During last week, May 24 to 30," a communique said, "we destroyed 432 German planes. Our losses were 134."

Four Axis patrol ships were reported sunk in aerial operations Sunday, but the Soviet information bureau did not specify where. (Red air and fleet units operate over the Black, Baltic, White and Barents seas against German naval craft and transports, protecting Allied supply lines and attacking those of the enemy.)

Russian fliers were credited with destroying or damaging 33 tanks, two armored cars, 160 trucks, 145 munitions carts, 10 field guns, two railway trains, an oil tank and a fuel dump on various sectors of the land front Sunday.

The information bureau announced that 940 Germans were killed in a series of three recent engagements on the central and Kalinin fronts, 600 by a Russian detachment on a four-day foray behind the Nazi lines at the centre.

INIQUITOUS FATE FOR AGED

Inadequacy Of Canadian Pensions System Is Criticized

3 Principles For Social Security Are Advanced At Pensioners Society Meet

It is positively iniquitous that a person must be reduced practically to the state of a pauper before he is entitled to a pension, Chester A. Ronning, B.Sc., principal of Camrose Lutheran College, and provincial leader of the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation, told a capacity audience at the regular monthly meeting of the Alberta Pensioners' Society Incorporated, at the I.O.O.F. hall, 103 street, Monday night. Besides Mr. Ronning, Alderman H. D. Ainlay also addressed the meeting.

Mr. Ainley too pointed out the inadequacy of the present pension scheme in Canada considering that this nation is the richest in natural resources in the world.

Edward C. Fisher, president of the society was in the chair. Musical entertainment was provided by several groups and individuals including A. Paxton, Mr. Greco and Mr. Melnychuk with instrumental numbers; solos by Rev. Mrs. Edwardson and Jimmie Richardson, and community singing led by Mrs. Steve Milne.

THREE PRINCIPALS.

Mr. Ronning stated that social security hinges upon the fulfilment of three principles, namely, education for the young, work for the middle aged and security for the old.

"These principles were practiced successfully by the patriarchial family, he said. For centuries the civilized world has preached these ideas but has failed to put them into practice.

Christianity provides that these principles be put into practice, and if they were, many of the present day economic and social problems would be solved, Mr. Ronning stated.

"But as long as the present economic system continues you shall never get more than the mere

Labor President Assured Support

Executive members of the Alberta Federation of Labor, in a communication to the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council, expressed confidence in Alfred Farmilo, president of the Alberta labor body and secretary of the Edmonton Trades Council.

The action of the Federation was taken in rebuttal of an attack made by labor adherents in Calgary relative to the special committee of the legislature studying the Workmen's Compensation Act.

The executive of the Alberta Federation of Labor, in its communication to the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council, stated that "it was surprised at the criticism voiced against Mr. Farmilo, as it had found the brief well under way and that considerable time and thought had been spent in preparing it."

The executive expressed its appreciation to Mr. Farmilo for his labors in connection with the preparation of the brief.

18 Persons Fined City Police Court

Eighteen persons, found in a gaming house, each were fined $5 and costs by Police Magistrate A. I. Miller, K.C., in city police court Tuesday.

The accused were found on the premises of Prairie Sports Ltd. when the place was raided by a morality squad of the city police department, last January. They were Peter Scheck, Steve Tymoschuk, W. S. Grant, Albert Hillier, Thomas Lynch, Pete Pelsma, William Kobelka, Fred Wozlowich, David Muir, Emil Roy, Tony Ross, Louis Friedman, Harvey Heilson, Reinhardt Skadsum, Frank Aylwin, John Fraser, Bernard Threadkill and Peter Prestiho.

The Prairie Sports Ltd. was fined $200 and costs last month and two keepers, Charles F. Anderson and Robert Strickland were each fined $50 and costs last week.

H. E. Hamly, of the Hamly Press, showed pictures of the printing industry to members of the Edmonton Cosmopolitan Club at their regular weekly luncheon at the Corona hotel Tuesday noon. W. A. White, president of the club, was chairman of the luncheon meeting.

Getting Around
with Jack DeLong

Horses are coming back in the army. Probably not as many in the dashing, charging lancers. Perhaps not as the faithful steeds that once galloped bravely into action with the artillery, but Old Dobbin is going to have a new lease of life and honorable service in the Canadian army soon.

Gasoline and rubber are the two reasons for this return to action of the faithful four-footed warriors.

Lt.-Col. J. J. Burton-Willison, V.D., commanding officer at the Red Deer Royal Canadian Army Service Corps Training Centre, stated Monday that a horse transport company is being formed at the Red Deer Training Centre.

Stables are now under construction at the camp and the training

Fire, Coal Trucks Crash In Street

A city fire truck and a coal truck were involved in an accident at the intersection of 118 Avenue and 97 Street Monday afternoon.

John Staton, 11402 85 Street, driver of the lighter truck collided with a truck driven by Jack Dickenson of Carbondale, when both trucks entered the intersection at the same time.

According to an eye witness, Staton was travelling at about 20 miles an hour while Dickenson was going about four or five miles an hour when the crash occurred.

Damage to the fire truck consisted of crumpled fenders on the left side, dented side and shattered hand pump stand. The steering was also damaged.

Dickenson's truck had the front damaged and the steering put out of order. Coal was strewn over the fire truck as well as across the width of the street.

Neither driver suffered injury.

Students Register

During Monday, 190 students in second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth year medicine, and second, third, fourth and fifth year dentistry, registered at the University of Alberta for the accelerated classes, in the two faculties, it was learned. They will complete their courses early in the new year. Registration is continuing Tuesday.

Operations Of Regional War Boards Scored

Criticism of regional boards established under the National War Labor Board was expressed by A. R. Johnstone, Toronto, vice-president of the Bartenders' International Union, at a meeting of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council Monday night.

Mr. Johnstone charged that the regional boards had not interpreted the spirit of the order-in-council P233, and in consequence 85 per cent of the workers of Canada were not getting the benefits which the order-in-council intended should accrue to them.

He said that in the recent negotiations between Edmonton hotel employers and members of the Beverage Dispensers' union, the prosecrination of the local regional board had cost hotel workers 65 cents weekly in cost-of-living bonus payments.

WON BY THREAT

Mr. Johnstone said the regional boards did not appear to give interpretation to the intent of the order-in-council and that any concessions given to labor had been won only through the exercise of labor's threat to strike.

He said there was strong reason to believe that it was the policy of regional boards, in fact there is proof, to delay as long as possible decisions on cost-of-living bonus payments, and only to accede when the workers involved in the dispute had sufficient strength to enforce their demands.

Mr. Johnstone came to Edmonton to participate in the negotiations between the hotel employees and proprietors on the payment of a cost-of-living bonus.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

What is your opinion of Edmonton's housing situation?

THE ANSWERS

JOHN STEWART, repairman: With the city population increasing by leaps and bounds, and with every one having full reason to believe that it will continue to increase even possibly at a greater rate, it seems that city authorities are here faced with a most serious situation. Many would build if the taxes were lower. They could be lowered considerably if the interest on the city's debt were cut in two.

MRS. S. W. SWANSON, housewife and mother of three children: With larger suites at a premium, the prospective tenant with children hasn't a chance. A by-law setting out slight increases in the monthly rent in proportion to the number of children would help offset the alleged damage to premises caused by children.

ALBERT OLOFSON, farmer: According to reports read in your paper, it seems that something has to be done before next winter if the city hopes to accommodate its residents. With the wage-earning power in Edmonton now at its all-time peak, it seems that some form of financing could be worked out whereby wage earners could borrow sufficient money with which they could erect the smaller type of home. It is this type of home that is at a most serious premium.

Edmonton Of 50 Years Ago Enjoyed Abundant Share Of Excitement

By FRANCOISE MARTIN

"Edmonton is usually a quiet place, a very quiet place. There are people who say it is positively dull . . ." read a news item in The Edmonton Bulletin on a pleasant day in June 1892—just 50 years ago.

But during the 30 days of June 1892, this settlement of approximately 1,500 people had its full share of excitement.

Installation of Edmonton's first electric lights took place, and these bright beacons disseminated their welcome rays in well selected spots. Eight points were chosen as the first to be electrically-lighted and all are well known today. They were the R.C.M.P. barracks; Namayo Avenue, now 97 Street; the Alberta hotel; the Hudson's Bay Company store; The Bulletin corner; Gallagher's butcher store on Jasper Avenue; First Presbyterian church, then at the corner of 104 Street and 99 Avenue and Norris and Carey's store.

Tar sands and an oil spring were found north of St. Albert and much speculation and some digging took place.

The town's first fire engine arrived, a masterful piece of equipment which could produce two continuous streams to be thrown 70 feet by means of two hand pumps.

But above all, Edmonton showed that it had the red-blooded determination of a frontier town, and indulged in a "feud" comparable to the tall tales of hill-billy country.

THE RAMIFICATIONS

The quarrel lasted for days and caused explosions in Ottawa, and in Regina, which was then the capital of the North West Territories.

During most of the goings-on, which took place because of "an attempt to steal the land office" and transfer it to the rival city of Strathcona, now South Side, the

Report Made On Mine Blast Is Considered

The report submitted by Mr. Justice Ewing, who conducted an investigation into the fatal explosion at the Brazeau Collieries Ltd. No. 3 mine at Nordegg on Oct. 31 last in which 29 miners were killed, is being considered by officials of the provincial department of lands and mines and the attorney-general's department, it was revealed Tuesday.

It was stated that as a result of the findings in the report, amendments to the Alberta Mines Act would be drafted and submitted to the next session of the legislature. Such amendments would be designed to prevent recurrence of such a tragedy.

There was no statement on whether any further action would be taken.

Mr. Justice Ewing found in his report that the disaster was due to a "genuine and sympathetic disregard of the provisions of the Mines Act" by officials of the company.

Board Surveying Staff Increases

Making a survey of unemployment insurance, employment and claims offices, members of a four-man survey board arrived in Edmonton Tuesday morning to inspect the local offices.

The members of the board are: E. H. Grantham, Ottawa, representing the Civil Service Commission; R. G. Barclay, Ottawa, representing the insurance branch, Unemployment Commission; Harris Johnston, Ottawa, representing the Selective Service Board, and Fred J. White, Winnipeg, regional superintendent for the Unemployment Commission.

The board is making a study of staff increases necessary to meet the expiration of unemployed persons between the ages of 16 and 69, and also to cope with general manpower regulations that will be issued from time to time.

Mr. White stated that any appointments made during the survey would be from the Civil Service eligible list. He added that appointment of additional staff had been found necessary at several points.

The survey has been completed in Port Arthur, Fort, William, Winnipeg, Regina, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, and Calgary. The board will stop over here until Wednesday night, when it will leave for Saskatoon.

Wholesalers Hear Details Restrictions

Each new restriction may seem like bad news, but wholesalers must decide that bad news to the individual may well spell good news to the country as a whole, in that it is evidence of a real gearing for total war, R. F. Chisholm, administrator of wholesale trade for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, told a gathering of Edmonton wholesalers at a meeting held at the Masonic Temple, Tuesday.

He spoke on several topics concerning wholesale business in accord with regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

A. M. MacDonald, president of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, was chairman.

Speaking of subsidies to wholesalers, Mr. Chisholm stated that the eventual cost of subsidies to this country is likely to be much less than the alternative of higher prices.

This policy is less expensive in the matter of immediate war cost and less expensive in avoiding a terribly costly post-war deflation and collapse, he stated.

THEIR JOB

"It is our job as wholesalers to see that the independent wholesalers come through these difficult years with as little grief as possible," Mr. Chisholm remarked in reference to the "small" businessman.

In enumerating the "wholesalers' creed," Mr. Chisholm stressed the urgent need for the practice of economics, especially in wholesale distribution of goods, trade practices, man power, and elimination of waste.

GIVES HINT

He urged that wholesalers encourage self-regulation which will actually be more restrictive than the regulations imposed officially, he stated.

The war machines of the world devour such enormous quantities of material that civilian supplies necessarily are restricted. But it's going to be fashionable "to do without," he said. Shiny elbows rather than shiny cars may become a mark of gentility.

McCauley Concert Group Plans Fetes

Sponsored by the McCauley school students in Grades 7 and 8, two concerts will be presented by the McCauley Concert group on Thursday and Friday evenings, at the school auditorium. They will begin at 8:30 p.m.

A full variety show will be given by the group who, little more than a year ago, gave their first weekly concert in the same hall. All proceeds, as usual, will be donated to the Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims. The Thursday evening performance will be for children, and the second one for adults.

Four quilts with appropriate names of 400 names of donors to the fund on each are being displayed currently in a window of The T. Eaton Company (Western) Ltd. They will shortly go overseas to be shown to the Edmonton district army units stationed overseas, before being given to people in bombed areas. Seven quilts have already gone overseas, and more are in course of production.

Naval Technicians Are Enlisted Here

There were 27 applicants accepted for service in various technical branches of the Royal Canadian Navy, after being interviewed here Sunday by Commander (E) W. W. Porteous, R.C.N.

Three men will go to the east or west coasts for basic training soon as naval artificers, engine room artificers, chief motor mechanics, stoker mechanics and electricians. Many more are still required for the electrical artificer branch, it was stated by Sub-Lt. D. Dougherty. Applicants must be single, between 17 and 22 and possess a grade 10 schooling at least.

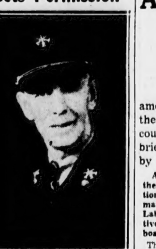
Gets Permission



Fire Chief James Macgregor, who was given permission by the city commissioners and firemen's union officials to hire men for fire brigade service above the 30-year age limit set by present agreements existing between the city and the union. Difficulty of finding men suitable for the work in the prescribed age limit necessitated the application for the extension of the age limit of hiring.

Federal Subsidy To Ease Housing Situation Urged

Adoption by the dominion government of a long term program for the provision of adequate low rent housing to meet the ever-growing shortage in cities throughout Canada was urged by delegates to the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council at a meeting held Monday evening at the Labor Hall.

A resolution was unanimously passed asking the dominion government to institute an immediate long term program for the provision of an adequate supply of low rent housing, subsidized by the government, and made available to families of low income, who cannot secure decent housing through ordinary private initiative."

The resolution asked also that the operation of the National Housing Act be continued and that permanent dominion, provincial and local housing authorities be set up, implemented with funds adequate to acquire land and to construct and manage large scale community subsidized housing projects."

It was asserted by delegates that the housing of workers was a national public responsibility that established the fact that public assistance must be given where ordinary private enterprise cannot provide such housing.

Delegates said that the housing situation in Edmonton was extremely bad, and that slum conditions already a health menace, were being rapidly extended through the lack of proper housing facilities.

It was emphasized that Edmonton, through rapid expansion from war work, faced a desperate house shortage which could only be overcome by federal assistance.

Man Disappears From City Hostel

City police have been notified of the disappearance from the Salvation Army Hostel, 97 street, of John Burton.

According to the report, Burton left the hostel at the week-end and, after failing to return on Monday, the city police were notified.

He is slightly built, five feet four inches tall, and 78 years old. He has white whiskers and is partly blind.

He wore grey trousers, a top coat and a fedora hat. He was carrying a long walking stick when he left the hostel.

Packers' Employees Will Be Organized

Active organization of packing plant employees in Edmonton will be undertaken by the Edmonton Trades and Labor council, it was decided at a meeting of that body Monday night.

A mass meeting of packing plant employees will be held in the Labor Hall on Thursday, June 11, at which plans for increasing present membership in one union, and the formation of other unions will be discussed.

A representative of a meat packers' union told delegates of the Trades Council that the workers in Edmonton's packing plants would welcome active organization plans.

He said that men now active in organization work were being discriminated against by employers in the packing industry, and charged also that wage schedules had been lowered through the speed-up plan required to meet the increased production at the packing plants.

Amending Of Workmen's Compensation Act Urged By Federation Of Labor

Request that the Workmen's Compensation Act be amended to provide that medical aid, now charged against the employee, be made chargeable against the accident account, was made by the Alberta Federation of Labor in a brief submitted Monday to the special committee appointed by the Alberta legislature to study the act's provisions.

Appreciation is expressed in the brief at the government's action in re-establishing the three-man board, but suggests that the Labor and industry representative be established as full time board members.

The brief was read at a meeting of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council to which body it had been submitted as information by the Alberta Federation of Labor. The Edmonton trades body endorsed the brief.

TIME EXTENSION

Other amendments to the act asked for in the brief include the extension of the time for reporting an accident to 24 hours subsequent to its occurrence, and that the term "injury" as spplied to firemen engaged in fire fighting be widened to include pneumonia and heart disease, and that these diseases be presumed to arise out of their duties.

It was suggested that there was need for legislation to provide against loss of time through ill-health, unemployment and old age.

Also it was suggested that drastic application of the act's provisions against employers who systematically ignore safety measures be taken, and that more rigid inspection be made. It was suggested that, if necessary, extra inspectors should be appointed to intensify inspection.

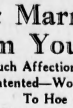
Don't Marry Man Whom You Don't Love

It Takes Much Affection to Keep Wife Happy and Contented—Woman Has Hard Row To Hoe in Her Home

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am tired of having to punch the time clock every morning and stand behind a counter all day and wearing myself out trying to sell things to women who are shopping instead of buying, and taking bawlings-out from the floor walker. I am going to marry so that I can take life easy. I am not in love with the man, but I like him well enough —at least I like him better than to a job



Dorothy Dix

Do you think I will be happy?

A SALESGIRL.

ANSWER: Frankly, no. Marriage should be a vocation not an avocation. It takes a lot of love to keep any wife happy and contented and glad she married the man she did, and thinking that working to make him a comfortable home is the most interesting and exciting occupation in the world. And if you haven't got the love, you lack what it takes. Your marriage fails flat, and you wonder whatever made you do it.

I know that many girls marry for a home and to get husbands to support them. They think how wonderful it would be to lie abed of a morning instead of having to get in the kitchen and rush through a pickup breakfast and get down to the office on time. And how much pleasanter it would be to spend the afternoons at the movies than it would be to try to sell some fat old lady a do-funny hat. And what a blessed relief it would be to let somebody else have to wrestle with the bills.

But for very few women in the world is marriage a life of Sybaritic ease. For the great majority of wives marriage is an 18-hour job, with no holidays and Sundays off, instead of an 8-hour job, and it is far harder work than they have ever done before. It is getting up and getting breakfast, getting their husbands off to work and the children off to school, fixing the baby's bottle, washing dishes, making beds, sweeping floors, listening to the baby's wails and the children's fights, going to market, cooking more meals, and sitting up after all the others have gone to bed to do the patching and darning.

NO PAY ENVELOPE

And the work is done within four walls instead of in an office, where there is coming and going and seeing new people and something is happening all the time. And there is no pay envelope on Saturday night. And husbands say things to their wives that no employer would dare to say to a good stenographer or a first-class saleswoman.

All of these things are right and fine and worthwhile if you are doing them for a husband you love. That glorifies every sacrifice and turns making a home into the grandest career that a woman can follow. But if she doesn't love her husband, it changes the picture into the dullest and drabbest and hardest job a woman can have.

And think of the man's side of the matter a little. Don't you think that you are doing an awfully lowdown, dishonest trick in marrying a man you do not love under false pretences? You know well enough that you have made him believe that you love him, or else he would not be assuming your support for the balance of your life. He isn't marrying just to get a housekeeper. He can hire one at any employment agency for a tenth of what your upkeep would be, and he would have to fire her if she didn't know how to cook, or get temperamental, or lost her good looks, whereas he will have to keep you, no matter how fat you get, or how hard you are to get along with.

No, he is marrying you because he loves you and because he believes you love him and that you will give him tenderness and sympathy and understanding and make him happy, and you are deliberately double-crossing him. Don't do it, for if you do your conscience at night will hurt you worse than your feet do now.

DOROTHY DIX.

WHAT IS A PROPOSAL?

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Would you consider "I love you" or "I can't live without you" a proposal? If not, what would you consider one? PEG.

Answer: Gracious, no. Far from it. Nothing that a man says to a woman in the sentimental line is to be considered a proposal unless it is coupled with a genuine bonafide offer of marriage and a request for her to name the wedding day. All the balance is mere conversation with which to pass a pleasant hour, and the man understands that the girl will take it as such.

When a boy tells a girl that he loves her, or that he cannot live without her, or that she is the ONE he has been searching for all of his life, and where has she been that he has never met her before, it doesn't mean a thing in the world except that he is trying to make himself agreeable. He is handing her his line. For there is a tradition among men that all women want to be made love to, and that all that any man has to do to be a fascinator is just to dish out the soft talk.

And that isn't such a bad guess either, for girls are so hungry for flattery that they gobble up all the mushy stuff that is offered them without stopping to see whether it is a good old reliable brand, or some sort of a fake imitation that will give them an awful headache if they swallow it.

I am always getting letters from girls who write me that they know that boys are in love with them because they have danced three times and kissed them good-night. Or that they know that boys are in love with them, though they have never mentioned it, because they can read it in their eyes. Or that they know boys are in love with them because they have been going "steady" with them for years and years. And they find that this only shyness that keeps them from proposing. To which I say: Tut and nonsense. Forget it. No man was ever yet so bashful that he didn't ask for the thing he wanted, and when he really desires a girl he ups and pops the question.

So when a boy tells you that he loves you, or that he can't live without you, just laugh it off and say: "Oh yeah!" instead of "yes."

Business Typing Studied at Home
Dupuis, Jim Savage, Jack Uar-

If you don't know touch typing, your chances may be limited in office work for typing is expected in all sorts of jobs.

Yes, there are typing jobs—if you know the quick, accurate touch system. Bosses aren't hiring slow-as-molasses, one-finger typists!

Why not learn touch typing at home with our instruction booklet? A keyboard chart shows how to place your fingers on the eight "guide keys"—j, a, k, s, l, d, f and semi-colon.

Then, as in the exercise pictured, you practice striking these keys. By moving only one finger at a time, striking sharply and lightly, you can work smoothly, evenly and tirelessly—as professional typists do.

Other exercises get you used to the other keys; each finger has its own section on the keyboard. But —no matter what key you type the finger must immediately return to its guide key.

This keeps you from popping all over the keyboard, willy-nilly, making mistakes.

Start learning with the aid of our 32-page typing booklet. Teaches touch typing with charts, exercises, speed drills. Gives rules for typing English; business, social and official letters. Can serve as a foundation for a business college course.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "TEACH YOURSELF TOUCH TYPEWRITING" to The Edmonton Bulletin Home Service, 60 Front street west, Toronto, Ontario. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

McKenney On Bridge

Recently I went down to Asbury Park, where the summer session of the 1942 national tournament will be held. After completing business matters with E. M. Goddard, chairman of the tournament, our discussion turned to famous hands played in the Convention Hall. I remember well how the players talked far into the night about the hand shown today, in which an opponent with three aces doubled a six-contract, only to have it made against him.

West thought the diamond ace his safest lead, but it was trumped. The play by South made up for North's wild bidding. The trump ace was cashed, then the other small trump led to dummy. Leaving one small trump at large—his only chance—declarer cashed just four of dummy's diamonds, discarding his four spades. Then the deuce of clubs was led and the jack finessed. West won and was caught without safe exit. He tried a club return, but then South made two clubs on which to discard North's two spades.

When a person seeks to find a set of "perfect measurements" for his particular age, he is looking for something which does not exist. There are such wide variations in human types that the only kind of standards available are "averages," and there never was a person who perfectly fit these "average measurements." Ideas of "perfect measurements" change with customs and times.

Your Baby And Mine

The causes for chronic stammering are real and varied. They are both psychological and physical in origin. Individuals so handicapped need the services of both physician and speech expert. But there is a type of temporary stammering which is exceedingly common-place in childhood. It begins suddenly and ends shortly if it is treated properly.

Most of us take speech so entirely for granted that we forget there is a time when speech is so difficult for the child, more so perhaps, than walking. We expect a child to stumble and totter and fall but genuinely we never expect him to halt and stutter. One seems natural behavior and the other a matter for concern.

In the case of children who are born left-handed and are forced to use the right hand, there is a definite influence upon the speech. Our forcing efforts have the same result as if we tangled wires so that a message had to take a circuitous instead of a direct route. The wires in this case are messages from the brain to the hand. The right side instead of the left side of the brain is the dominant one and is sending messages to the left hand. Because of custom we demand that the child use the right hand which makes it necessary for the brain messages to be re-routed with consequent influence upon the speech.

Even small children are readily influenced by our expectations. If we demand glib speech when the child hesitates and stammers, the child becomes conscious of our anxiety and it increases the halting, self-conscious efforts with which he tries to meet our demands.

Mrs. G. C. explains in almost classic manner the onset of temporary stammering mentioned above. She writes, "My 3-year-old was talking as any child would until suddenly he began to stammer. I do not know what caused this and have tried everything I know of to keep him from it. But it has become so pronounced that he cannot utter a word without stuttering. Please tell me what I can do to overcome this!"

ALL the things you have done already have tended to increase the child's confusion, self-consciousness and stammering. The best thing is to ignore it. Pretend that he is speaking naturally and let him stammer his way through a sentence without help from you.

Meanwhile, make certain that his environment is not too demanding, so that he is being upset by your domination. Note whether he has companions who are stammering. Check his handedness. These are all temporary causes of stammering. But whatever the cause, stammering gradually diminishes—or should—if you treat it to complete indifference. You thus remove your own anxiety as a further cause for halting speech.

Our leaflet, "The Stammering Child," suggests exercises and rhymes which help the child's speech to become more rhythmical. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Mrs. Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

McCoy Health Service

I do not know of any asset more valuable to the health of the family than a good cook!

The other members of the family will probably take the cooking for granted. They may appreciate and praise something unusual in the way of a meal or dessert, but they will in all likelihood not appreciate the care, planning and labor which go into the serving of three meals a day on the table.

On the face of it, cooking is likely to be a somewhat thankless task. Yet I do not know of any other activity in the home which pays the same dividends. The woman who puts on the table a tempting hot meal and then sees the home folks sit down together to enjoy it, knows a quiet satisfaction which is hard to beat.

She knows they are getting foods which are good for them, and foods which are nourishing and will contribute to their continued good health in a very definite way.

Yes, good cooking is an accomplishment which is useful and profitable every day in the year.

It is true that to be a "natural born" cook is a talent with which a person must be born. Some people naturally have a knack in the way of blending various flavors so as to extract the last bit of delicious oumess from a food. Such people are good at cooking, and they enjoy cooking. Others, having to work out this talent, may nevertheless become excellent cooks by learning a few fundamental principles, and by practice.

As the blanket term "a good cook" covers a lot of territory, it might be well to outline briefly a few of the points it includes. First of all, a good cook has learned to so prepare foods as to preserve in full nutritive value. The nourishing elements in that foods have been protected and saved.

Second, a good cook knows how to make foods delicious as to taste. Third, she has studied foods in relation to health. She serves a diet protective to health, which is well-balanced in the way of supplying the proteins, minerals, vitamins, bulk, and fats or oils which are needed. She also studies the use of starch. If starches are wisely used they may be of great value by providing heat and energy, but on the other hand, they are dangerous if used to excess, or improperly used. One of the most valuable lessons in dietetics is this lesson of knowing how to use and how not to use, starchy foods.

Fourth, she understands the different methods of cooking, such as broiling, casserole cookery, and so on.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, 1151 West 6th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Minute Make-Ups

Sorting out wardrobes to see what's what is the national feminine pastime! Here's a Minute Beauty Trick. Press your last year's navy blue. Pop on some bright red buttons. A few yards of bright red veiling will give zip to your last year's "old blue hat"! Next day cover the red buttons with wide white ribbing and veil your hat in sheer white veiling. A fresh accent of bright red for your mouth and you'll know that Spring is here!

What To Do

What method of punishment do you recommend for a small child?

Answer—It seems to me that depriving a child of something he likes, many times, is a fitting punishment. As soon as he realizes that, when he is disobedient, he may not have a trip to the zoo, or a day at the lake, he will try to do as he is told.

It is wrong to threaten a child with the bogeyman or a big wolf, because it creates an unhealthy fear in the child.

Whipping and spanking are very apt to upset the child's nervous system. Children, as well as animals, respond to gentle treatment.

Promise your child a reward for doing the right thing. There is more incentive then for him to behave than if you whip him after he has done something wrong.

Potato Output For Export To U.S. Increased

OTTAWA, June 2.—(CP)—Joint Canadian-United States action to increase Canadian potato production for sale in the United States, and to step up the Canadian output of hog products, was announced yesterday by the agriculture department.

The plans, which have received formal approval of the Canadian government, follow recommendations of the joint economic committee of Canada and the United States.

The potato arrangement provides that steps will be taken to increase Canadian potato production, for sales as table stock in the United States in the event of a short crop in that country or for manufacture into starch for lend-lease shipment if United States production meets table needs.

Platinum Control

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(AP)—The War Production Board yesterday clamped rigid controls on all transactions in platinum, to prevent Germany from getting any of the metal badly needed for her munitions production. The controls are "expected to stop the illicit international traffic in platinum which is known to exist," W.P.B. said.

Eat Peanuts And Get Vitamin B In A Nutshell

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

This is the second of six articles on special wartime menu problems.

The harder we work, the more energy foods we need. We want more potatoes and bread, we crave sweets, and are more lavish with butter, salad oils and other fats. These are the foods used by our bodies to supply energy. But many of us fail to realize that when more starch foods and sweets are eaten, more Vitamin B is needed, too. Otherwise the energy-giving foods will not be used efficiently.

The most frequent reason for too little Vitamin B in the diet is the eating of highly refined foods. Sticking to whole-wheat bread and whole-grain cereals is one way of correcting this. Adding foods that are rich sources of this vitamin is another way, and one of the most delicious of these foods is peanuts.

Peanuts—which we have looked upon as mere tasty tid-bits—are actually one of our very important and nutritious foods.

The meals of the average family are more often than not deficient in Vitamin B. Peanuts can soon pick up this lack. One easy way is to put peanuts more often in cookies. Peanut cookies are a delicious accompaniment to fruit or other desserts, they are perfect with the bedtime glass of milk, and splendid for the children's after-school snack.

PEANUT COOKIES

Three tablespoons butter, 1-3 cup brown sugar, 1 egg well beaten, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ cup flour, 2 teaspoons milk, ½ cup finely chopped peanuts, ½ teaspoon lemon juice.

Cream butter, add sugar and egg. Mix and sift baking powder, salt and flour; add to first mixture; then add milk, peanuts and lemon juice. Drop from teaspoon on buttered cookie sheet 1 inch apart and place half a peanut on top of each. Bake 12 to 15 minutes in moderately slow oven (325 degrees F.)

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Cantaloupe, whole wheat muffins, jam, coffee, milk.

Luncheon: Welsh rabbit on enriched toast, canned fruit, peanut cookies, tea, milk.

Need Deep Faith To Defeat Enemy

DELAWARE, O., June 2.—(AP)—Lord Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, asserted Monday that if we are to break this evil madness now loose in Nazi Germany, the conviction with which we defend our faith must be as deep and as passionate as that with which our enemies would destroy it."

In an address prepared for Ohio Wesleyan university's centennial commencement, the ambassador said that in Germany "the state, in the person of Hitler, is the sole and final judge of right and wrong.

"To the worship of this new god, Hitler, by appeal to many of its richest qualities, has perverted the young mind of Germany . . . just as Napoleon harnessed to his ambition the noblest instincts of the French Revolution, so Hitler, with greater means and greater lack of scruple, has seduced the German youth, and in so doing, created what will surely be the greatest of our post-war problems."

Beryl Wright, PO. Bain Are Wed In B.C.

WHITE and blue flowers decorated the United Church at Agassiz, B.C., recently, when Beryl Edith Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Wright of Edmonton became the bride of Pilot Officer Archibald J. J. Bain, R.C.A.F., of Agassiz. The service was performed by the Agassiz minister, Rev. Bridgeman's father, Rev. Bain.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a rose-colored ensemble with matching accessories. Her arm bouquet was made up of carnations, iris and rosebuds in shades of pink.

Miss Violet Bain, sister of the bridegroom, was the bride's only attendant. Pilot Officer George E. Oliver, R.C.A.F., Vancouver, supported the bridegroom as best man.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Mrs. Bain at the organ.

RECEPTION

A reception was held at the manse following the ceremony. Mrs. Bain and Mrs. Wright received the guests.

PO. and Mrs. Bain left for a honeymoon trip to Vancouver and other west coast points. Returning, they will take up new duties at Rivers, Manitoba, where PO. Bain has been appointed instructor with the R.C.A.F.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding in Agassiz were Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Wright of Edmonton, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Leake, Mrs. Abrams, Mrs. E. Sumner, Miss Dunn, Miss E. Raper, all of Vancouver.

War Work Of I.O.D.E. Is Reported

MONTREAL, June 2. — (CP) — Goods and services valued at $885,000 were distributed at home and abroad by the Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, during the past year., Mrs. H. S. Angus of Toronto Monday told delegates to the I.O.D.E. annual meeting here.

Mrs. Angus, national convener of I.O.D.E. war services, presented the main report at Monday evening's session. Of the total, the provinces shared in contributions as follows; Prince Edward Island, $329; Nova Scotia $5,333; New Brunswick, $7,166; Quebec $74,999; Ontario $396,893; Manitoba $40,435; Saskatchewan $53,942; Alberta, $51,558; British Columbia $93,200; and the Yukon $7,703.

YUKON CHAPTERS

Mrs. Angus paid special tribute to the three chapters of the Yukon, saying that if every chapter in Canada had contributed to the war effort at the same rate as that made by the three combined chapters, "Our I.O.D.E. war work would have been 2½ times as much as it was".

Mrs. Wilton, convener of the sub-committee of overseas shipping, reported that more than 100 tons of new clothing, new blankets and quilts, field comforts and personal comforts valued at $344,519 were shipped to Great Britain. In addition, garments, blankets and quilts valued at $58,668 were shipped during the first three months of this year to Polish peoples now living in Russia.

Mrs. Walton said that Polish relief was established by Order at the request of the Canadian government in conjunction with Polish government authorities.

TO RECEIVE

Mrs. E. Wershof, president of the Edmonton Chapter of Hadassah, who will receive at the tea planned for Sunday in Talmud Torah hall, to mark the silver anniversary of the founding of the Canadian Hadassah.

Local Chapter Of Hadassah Plans Tea

Marking the silver jubilee anniversary of the Canadian Hadassah, members of the Edmonton chapter will entertain at a tea in Talmud Hall Sunday afternoon from 3 to 6 p.m. The Canadian organization was founded in Toronto in 1917 and has chapters in all principal cities in Canada.

Mrs. E. Wershof, president, will receive the guests and past presidents will pour. Mrs. J. Cohen is in charge of refreshments and Mrs. H. Bloomfield the program.

The chapters in Canada concern themselves with both welfare and war work. Through individual chapters donating the necessary funds the Agricultural School for Girls at Nahalal, Palestine was established and is maintained; a baby creche is maintained, a convalescent home kept up, and 10,000 Jewish children from Nadi-dominated countries and 35,000 refugees cared for in Palestine.

WAR WORK

Purchase of two mobile canteens, one for use in England and the other for Palestine are highlights of the organization's war work. Also included is the purchase of an aircraft ambulance for Palestine; the establishment of soldiers' clubs for Empire soldiers in the Holy Land; the furnishing of a ward in the Sara Delano Roosevelt Home for Bombed Children in England and now the building of a military hospital for Empire forces in Nahalal.

Mrs. Anna Raginsky, of Montreal, president of the organization, visited in Edmonton last year. Mrs. A. J. Freiman of Ottawa, under whose presidency the association was organized was president from 1917 until her death in 1941.

Wedding Vows Are Pledged At Mundare

A pretty wedding ceremony was performed in the Monastery Chapel in Mundare Saturday, when Rev. Father Kohut united in marriage Mildred Kozack, daughter of Mr. A. Dell of Edmunton and Peter Josey, son of Mrs. Anne Josey of Beverly, Alta.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. B. Kozack, was gowned in floor-length white organza fashioned on graceful lines. Her veil of tulle was caught to her head with a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried an arm bouquet of pink and white carnations.

Miss Helen Kozack, cousin of the bride and Miss Nancy Hrabee were bridesmaids, frocked alike in gowns of petal pink and peach and carried arm bouquets of pastel sweetpeas. Mr. Paul Ogrodnick and Mr. William Hrabee were best men.

Following the ceremony, a reception to about 300 guests was held. Mrs. Dell received her guests wearing a smart wine crepe model frock, wine accessories and corsage of white carnations.

The bride's table was centred with a three tiered wedding cake and flanked with bouquets of spring blossoms.

The young couple will make their home at Riley. Travelling, the bride wore a soft blue ensemble and beige accessories

Edmonton guests attending the ceremony included Mrs. A. Josey, Mr. Steve Josey, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Glosarp, Miss Polly Lastwika, Mr. and Mrs. V. Kryze.

Canadian Women In Air Force Study Methods U.S. Volunteers

Ann Brada Evans, M. MacDonald, Frances Newell of Edmonton Among Group in New York Studying Raid Warning System

NEW YORK, June 2.—(CP)—An eager group of 20 young Canadian airwomen gathered Monday around a vast map-table at 1st Fighter Command headquarters to begin a two-weeks' period of study of the methods by which the United States army watches over the safety against air raids of the densely-populated New York area, it was disclosed today.

Among them were three Edmonton girls, Ann Brada Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. E. Evans, 9 Stony Plain Road; Miss Marion MacDonald and Miss France Newell, daughter of Mr. C. F. Newell, K.C. * Thrilled by the welcome they received from New York citizens they arrived Sunday, the girls, trim in their blue uniforms of the Royal Canadian Air Force (women's division), found studies much interrupted by New York's men and women reporters and photographers.

For if New York had something to offer the Canadian airwomen, they had equally something to learn this city which sees its womenfolk flocking to the recruiting stations to apply for enlistment in the projected U. S. Women's Auxiliary Army Corps.

SECTION OFFICER "INTERVIEWED"

questions in regard to their terms of enlistment, discipline, hours of duty, uniforms, relationship between officers and "privates," and a host of other details were showered upon Section Officer K. S. Dickson, formerly of Moncton, N.B., and now of R.C.A.F. headquarters, Ottawa, who is command of the group.

Miss Dickson said the girls were looking forward to changing Tuesday into summer weight uniforms.

The airwomen are quartered in a warning service.

I.O.D.E. Hears Of Motion To Establish New Scholarship Plan

MONTREAL, June 2.—(CP)—Delegates to the annual meeting of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire heard Monday a recommendation for the establishment of a "new" $500.000 war memorial fund, to provide bursaries and overseas post-graduate scholarships for sons and daughters of ex-servicemen and women of the Second Great War.

The fund, which would be patterned after a similar fund set up after the First Great War, would "pay a permanent tribute to the service and sacrifice of Canadian men and women in this war."

A notice of motion on the new fund was read by Mrs. J. D. Detwiler of London, Ont., convener of the First Great War fund. A copy of the notice will be sent to each of the 900 I.O.D.E. chapters across Canada pending action at the National Chapter's next annual meeting.

IN EACH PROVINCE

The notice called for the annual award in each province of a post-graduate scholarship for overseas study and a bursary to be held in a Canadian university, with preference to be given to the son or daughter of an ex-serviceman or woman of the present conflict.

The War Memorial Committee recommended that overseas post-graduate scholarships be not awarded this fall due to war conditions. However, the committee suggested that all scholarships held over last year because of the war be held again for one year, providing the recipients still are eligible.

ENDOWMENT FUND

The delegates, in annual meeting here until Thursday, also heard during their afternoon sessions the report of Mrs. R. H. Hart of Winnipeg, convener of the Endowment Fund, which provides for the development, extension, maintenance and administration of the order, its work, objects and aims.

Mrs. Hart reported that the fund now totals $71,959, of which $23.000 was invested in long-term Victory Bonds during the year.

Her report recalled that at the 1930 annual meeting a resolution was adopted that a fund of at least $200.000 be raised. It suggested that the building of the Endowment Fund to reach the original objective should be considered by the members, and added:

"When we reach our objective it means that we have guaranteed to the generations of Canadians yet unborn the assistance we have been glad and proud to render during our life-time"

Eunice Armstrong, Miss Muriel Melntosh, Miss Jean Woodhead, Miss Eileen Magee, Miss Margaret McLean, Miss Chrla McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Ian McIntosh, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Banham, Miss Eileen McLeod.

Mr. Robert Torrie, Mr. Ted Zimmerman, Mr. Martin Donahan, Mr. Alvin Chambers, Mr. Den Woodhead, Mr. Frank Montgomery, Mr. Bert Oscroft, Mr. Jack Brown, Mr. Robert Banham and Miss Alma Woodhead.

GOVERNOR

Miss Jessie Kerr of Saskatoon, who was named governor of the Stagette Clubs at the annual meeting in Edmonton last week. She succeeds Miss Margaret Manson of Edmonton.

Nazis' Tank Repair Unit Is Captured

CAIRO, June 2.—(AP)—The Germans had a good idea when they attacked in Libya last week. They brought along a big, mobile tank repair unit to keep their mechanical forces in order. But it didn't work. British forces captured the unit.

Son Tells Of Events On Day Mother's Death

Events leading to the discovery of his mother's body outside their Chipewyan Prairie farm home were described in supreme court Tuesday by Alberta Cougan in the trial on a charge of murder of his step-father, Pierre Cougan.

Cougan is charged with slaying his wife, Mary Cougan, at their home on the Janvier reserve on Sept. 4 last. This is the third time he has appeared on the charge, the jury in two trials held last fall failing to agree upon a verdict.

The witness told the court that his father on the night his mother died, called him and asked him to get out of bed as he heard his moth, er hollering.

"I dressed and followed daddy outside. He took an axe with him and remarked that he would kill the horse or cow. Your mother has been kicked by a horse or cow," the witness declared.

Answering J. W. McClung, K.C., crown prosecutor, the witness stated he did not see any horse or cow near the farm home.

"I saw my little sister outside. She was crying and was wet. She was just outside the door," he said.

Father told me to call another Indian and sent me for the priest. "When I returned mother's body was inside the cabin. I lit the lamp," he told the court.

He identified also a stained suit of underwear as the suit worn by his father the night his mother died.

The witness said there was no quarrel between his father and mother on the day she met her death.

Answering Mr. McClung the witness stated his father's eyesight was sufficiently good to enable him to play poker. "He was playing the day previous to mother's death," he added.

Elderly Resident Desires To Work

John J. Croft, 92, resident of Edmonton for more than 40 years still believes that the north is the "land of opportunity" and feels "almost cramped" to go north and work in the ground floor of northern development.

He celebrated his birthday on Tuesday and stated that if he were a bit younger he would go north right away and take an active part in the development of the north.

Mr. Croft has three sons, Charles of Edmonton; Jack of Mannville, and Will of Calgary, a daughter, Mrs. Alice Chute of Berwick, N.S.; 17 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren. His wife died three years ago at 89.

TENDER FOR SUPPLY AND INSTALLATION OF LIGNITE AND BITUMINOUS COAL STOKERS AND SUPPLY OF STEEL STEAM HEATING BOILERS FOR VARIOUS R.C.A.F. SCHOOLS.

Tender No. 19-1-102—Steel Steam Heating Boilers

Tender No. 19-1-103—Coal Stokers

SEPARATE SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the Director, Department of Munitions and Supply, Ottawa, Ontario, will be received until 5 p.m. (E.D.S.T.), June 9th, 1942.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied by the Department, and in accordance with the conditions set forth therein. These forms, together with the plans and specifications and form of contract, are on exhibition at the offices of the Department of Munitions and Supply (Construction Branch), Ottawa, Ontario, at which offices plans and specifications may be obtained upon the deposit of $25.00 in the form of a certified cheque, made payable to the Receiver General of Canada. This deposit will be remitted when the plans and specifications are returned in good condition.

Each tender must be accompanied by a certified cheque on a chartered bank in Canada, payable to the Receiver General of Canada, or Bearer Bonds as specified in the form of tender for ten per cent. (10%) of the amount of the tender.

The cheque or bonds of the successful tenderer will be forfeited should he decline to enter into a contract for the work, or should he fail after accepting the contract to complete same in accordance with the plans and specifications.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

G. K. SHEILS,
Deputy Minister,
Department of Munitions and Supply,
Ottawa, May 16, 1942.

Skylight Collapses: Rib Is Fractured

Mrs. Richard Morgan, 113 Rudyk block, Jasper avenue and 97 street, was admitted to the Royal Alexandra hospital suffering from a rib fracture and possible internal injuries, as the result of a fall through a skylight in the block Tuesday.

Mrs. Morgan accidentally stepped on the skylight which collapsed under her weight. She fell to the floor of the building store.

Warning Now Issued About Disease Cases

Warning that all cases of communicable disease, even though they be mild, should be reported immediately to the secretary of the local Board of Health or to the Provincial Health Board in Edmonton, was issued Tuesday by Dr. M. R. Bow, deputy minister of health.

Dr. Bow stated that in many cases infection was spread in schools throughout the province by pupils suffering a mild form of disease, cases of which had not been reported. In some cases, particularly scarlet fever, the rash disappears and there is no apparent sign that the student is suffering from a communicable disease. Infection is spread in this manner.

Referring to the health situation in the province, Dr. Bow said the situation was at present satisfactory, with no outbreaks of disease of an epidemic nature being reported.

With respect to the danger of infection in communicable diseases, Dr. Bow particularly mentioned scarlet fever, which he declared was a dangerous infectious disease, which is principally due to the transfer of infection from some previous case or by a carrier.

He said the disease is preventable and urged teachers and parents to assist health authorities in preventing the spread of the disease.

First symptoms of the disease, Dr. Bow said, included vomiting, followed by sore throat, headache and fever. A heavily-coated tongue with raised red points—"strawberry tongue"—is also characteristic. The rash usually begins within 12 or 24 hours of the onset. In the mildest cases the rash may disappear within a few hours, but in other cases, persons suffering from the disease were often permitted to come into contact with others, thus spreading the malady, Dr. Bow said.

"It should be borne in mind that in some epidemics of scarlet fever, mild cases of the disease may occur in which there is no evidence of rash," Dr. Bow stated. The first symptoms, however, were present.

Lethbridge Mill Rate Is Lowered

LETHBRIDGE, June 2.—(CP)—Lethbridge's prayers will be assessed at the rate of 38.5 mills this year—the lowest tax rate since 1930—and the system of government was adopted by this city in 1928. The 1941 rate was 39.5 mills.

The tax rate was struck at a special council meeting last night after adoption of final estimates.

Of the total levy 20.8 mills is for city purposes and 17.7 mills for school purposes; last year 22 mills was for city purposes and 17.5 mills for school.

Taxes this year are expected to produce a total of $485,523 compared with $483,716 last year. It was estimated a surplus of $1,089 would result. Total revenue for city and school purposes was estimated at $620,390.

Fedorah District Farmer Found Dead

Albert Hewett, 70, a bachelor farmer of the Fedorah district, was found dead in his shack by neighbors Monday afternoon, according to word received by R.C.M.P. Superintendent Bird, from Constable Poole of the Thorhild detachment.

Investigation revealed that death was from natural causes. He was found lying on the floor of his shack.

Bar Welcomes New Justice To Supreme Court

Members of the Edmonton bar welcomed Mr. Justice W. A. Macdonald as a member of the supreme court, trial division, when he sat here Tuesday. He was presiding at the action brought by Mrs. Ellen A. Spratt, Edmonton, against the City of Edmonton seeking $7,500 special and general damages for injuries received in a trolley bus accident at the intersection of 98 Avenue and 98 Street on Feb. 10, 1940.

Welcoming Mr. Justice Macdonald on behalf of the Edmonton Bar, George H. Steer, K.C., said that he had been instructed by the members of the bar to congratulate him on his elevation to the ancient and historic position which he now occupies, and to express the fervent hope that he may long be spared to adorn it by judgments which, by his work elsewhere, we know will be characterized by the cold neutrality of an important judge, tempered with the courtesies and consideration invariably experienced at your hands by litigants, witnesses, counsel and other court officials.

"We are living in days that try the souls of men and the institutions under which we live, in days which lead men to think of the fundamentals of democracy and from their thoughts there emerges, as the condition of all human progress, the freedom of the human spirit," Mr. Steer continued.

BAR CONFIDENT

"The Edmonton Bar is confident that, as one of His Majesty's justices of the supreme court, you will find a larger scope for your great talents, and so add further distinction to an already distinguished career.

"And finally the Edmonton Bar wishes you in your new field of activity as much happiness as may be experienced by any of us in these troubled days in which we live," concluded Mr. Steer.

REPLY FROM BENCH

Mr. Justice Macdonald thanking the Edmonton Bar for its congratulatory message and sentiments of friendship and goodwill assured them that he deeply appreciated them. He said that in District Court he had learned to have a great regard for the very important court members paid in the administration of justice.

"The rule of law would be futile and meaningless if no adequate machine was provided for its administration. It seems to me that the members of the Bar play a far more important part in that administration than they are given credit for. They co-operate with the Courts a that justice may be done," he said.

"The system is not perfect, no system where the human factor is a part can be perfect, but it is the best system that has been derived for the administration of law for free men."

Milk For Britain Auction Is Ready

The greatest array of merchandise ever assembled at an auction sale will be on display on the market square on Wednesday afternoon when city auctioneers stage their annual sale in aid of the Kinsmen Milk for Britain Fund.

The articles to be offered for sale range from purebred livestock to chickens, from a $250 chesterfield suite to newly kitchen chairs. Every conceivable line of article will be on sale, a spokesman for the auctioneers stated Tuesday. Those who want their winter's supply of coal can get it at the auction and at the same time donate a considerable amount to the Milk for Britain Fund.

There will be groceries galore to choose from, and if any person is contemplating furnishing a home the auction is the place to get that furniture.

Four military bands will be on hand to enliven the proceedings, and the Kinette club will operate booths on the square at which refreshments can be obtained.

At the conclusion of the sale officials of Hitler, Mussolini, and Tojo will be burnt.

20,000 Killed In Raid On Cologne

NEW YORK, June 2. — (AP) — Mass British air raids on Cologne killed "in the neighborhood of 20,000" persons and injured another 54,000, the New York Times said yesterday in reporting "private advices from neutral neutral observers in Berlin."

Special detachments of sanitary forces of the German army have been sent to the Rhineland city, the paper disclosed, to aid municipal officials in meeting the spread of disease in the present warm weather.

Three-fifths of the approximately 800,000 residents of Cologne are being evacuated to the Munich area to be housed in emergency barracks erected in the last 24 hours, the paper said.

In addition and despite official orders against travelling, the populations of other Rhineland cities, including Aachen, Duesseldorf, Wuppertal and Mainz, have begun mass migrations to future bombardments, The Times said.

The Times said its information had been relayed from Europe Monday night.

Consulate Stoned

PUEBLA, Mexico, June 2.—(AP)—A large crowd stoned the building housing the closed German consulate and smashed most of its windows Sunday night before police dispersed the demonstrators. Earlier 70,000 persons paraded in favor of the war against the Axis.

Curtin Sounds Defi To Nippon To Try Invasion

CHUNGKING, June 2.—(AP)—Fierce fighting is raging south of Nanchang in Kiangsi province, where reinforced Japanese columns numbering 6000 men have started a new drive threatening the rear of the Chinese defending western Chekiang province, a battle zone 200 miles to the east, the Chinese command announced today.

By The Canadian Press

Australia's prime minister, John Curtin, bluntly challenged Japan to attempt an invasion of the down-under continent today and declared that some the arrival of United States reinforcements "the enemy has found his most southerly adventure beyond his capacity to execute."

On the critical China war front, Chiang Kai-Shek's Chinese armies were reported to have recaptured Shaokichan, north of the Japanese-held Chekiang province capital of Kinhwa, and killed 400 Japanese troops in a surprise attack.

A Chinese army spokesman said, however, that Japanese troops had driven 35 miles southwest from Kinywa in the east coast fighting and advanced within 10 miles of Chunking, one of the main targets of Japanese raids against suspected allied air base sites.

CONFUSED FIGHTING

Confused fighting spread through several of China's eastern provinces, with the invaders operating on a big scale in an apparent attempt to crush Gen. Chiang's armies and end the long and exhausting war on that front.

In Australia, Prime Minister Curtin launched the commonwealth's second liberty loan drive with the declaration that "Japan's program at last had suffered a stalemate," and he added:

"I defy the enemy to land large forces in Australia."

Coincidentally, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced that the wreck of three Japanese midget submarines destroyed in an unsuccessful attempt to attack Sydney harbor Sunday had been located. Smashed by depth charges and artillery fire, two sunken hulks had already been recovered.

11 Are Ordained Christian Workers

Ordination of 11 Christian and Missionary Alliance workers was made in a service at Beulah Tabernacle Monday by Rev. H. E. Nelson, home secretary of the alliance.

Rev. G. A. Hanna, Canadian district superintendent, was chairman and the 11 called to the ministry were:

Gordon Anderson, Kindersley, Sask.; William Kesley, Morwayne; Melvin Ashdown, Beaverdale; Ernest Kennedy, Wembley; Charles Alton, Mirror; Henry Schroeder, Herbert, Sask.; Archie Rusik, Drumheller; Sask.; Ferguson Hanna; Murray Downey, Regina; John Harder, North Mark; Eric Berg, Denzil, Sask.

The Christian and Missionary Alliance has been in session for five days. The convention will close Tuesday.

In 1880, a comet was observed by astronomers until it had receded 740,000,000 miles from the sun.

CARIBBEAN CRISIS

From Tropic Seas Where Subs Patrol And Trouble Brews

CHAPTER I

IT was a little past noon when the mailboat reached Abas Island and Bill Talcott, who had been up since dawn, noticed with amazement the arrival of four visitors. He had no difficulty in spotting the new man Halsey, a rangy, lantern-jawed individual in his forties, and he guessed that the skinny little fellow with the voluminous briefcase would be the company auditor.

But the other two, a mustached character much the worse for the ride across Anegada Passage, and a slender blonde girl in plum-colored slacks, were entirely out of place. It was only because the girl was so positive in ordering the transfer of her luggage that Bill Talcott decided she must be a relative of Halsey's who had come along to see him settled in his new home.

"I'm your successor," the rangy man admitted after he had gotten the dock under his feet. "Not surprised you didn't meet us in Saint Thomas. Had no idea it was such a long trip. This is Struthers, the auditor, and Mr. MacDowell."

The auditor's too-heavy clothing gave him the appearance of having been fried in deep fat; he shook hands gravely and opened the briefcase to fuss with credentials. The mustached MacDowell responded with a grunt, mopped beads of sweat from his heavy gray face, and didn't seem to see Talcott's proffered hand.

The girl in the plum-colored slacks was fresh as a zephyr, as coolly unconcerned as a scudding cloud. "I'm June Paterson," she announced, wrinkling her pert nose. "Lowell Byrd's cousin. He cabled that you were expecting to return to the Continent. I've been spending a month with friends in Charlotte Amalie and Lowell's afraid I'll go native. You're to look after me."

You could have shouted at Bill Talcott that a shark was swimming within 50 feet of him and he wouldn't have turned a hair. You could have told him that one of the blacks from the nitrate pits had gone crazy with rum and heat and was crouched behind him with a naked machete, and he would have accepted the warning with a grin. But for a... attractive young woman to calmly announce that she was delivering herself in His charge—

"Wh-what?" Bill Talcott gasped.

"Aren't you thrilled?" she murmured, lowering her lashes in exaggerated coquette. And then she swept away to organize the confused scampering of houseboys for luggage.

Bill Talcott gaped, wracking his brain to recall Lowell Byrd's cousin. Could this be the kid he'd danced with after the water polo meets at Cornell? Dimly he remembered a lot of arms and legs all wrapped in yards of green silk. It had been a dozen years since he had shared a room with Lowell Byrd in engineering school. Suddenly, because you don't go in for the social niceties after six years on a place like Abas, he became conscious that he had neither shaved nor changed his clothes.

"I suppose you received Winters' cable " Halsey was saying. "I presume your accounts are in shape for the customary audit?" The new man's critical eye scanned the rocky, barren contour of the island. Already he was fretting in the closeness of the brassy, stifling heat; flaring his nostrils at the smell.

"I'm all set," Talcott said. "We'll go up to the house for a drink. You'll be able to get in a swim before lunch if you like."

Halsey hesitated, a half-smile on his lips, and the sweating little auditor cut in. "Thanks for the invitation, Talcott," Struthers said in a thin voice. "But if you don't mind, Halsey and I will get directly to work. If you'll just show us to the office."

Bill Talcott nodded in mild surprise. Such eagerness to buckle down didn't seem just right not after a 1600-mile steamship ride topped off with a night and a morning on the jolting mailboat. Still, auditors were creatures of habit more than whim and Struthers seemed set on living up to his role. Shrugging, Talcott pointed to a cluster of galvanized buildings on the ridge and taking June Paterson and the wobbly MacDowell in hand, he set off along the path to his bungalow.

Tall, frosted glasses appeared, luggage melted from sight, and Talcott relaxed with his guests on the terrace. From comfortable chairs they watched the rustling fronds of royal palms against the trade-wind sky, eyed the antics of a tiny lizard perched on the swaying bough of a flamboyant tree.

June Paterson fidgeted and her eyes glinted hostilely. She sniffed. "From what Lowell told me I expected to find you living in a cave. So you're leaving all this to go in the army?"

"I have to take up my commission," he said, and decided that she was horribly spoiled. He didn't think it necessary to tell her that all this included operation of a fertilizer plant. Her uplifted nose must have told her that. He didn't tell her, either, that the population of Abas consisted of tough blacks; that she was the first white woman who had set foot there in more than a year.

The recovering MacDowell filled his mouth with ice and grunted. "Say, it's kinda nice here. This one o' the Virgin Islands?"

Talcott smiled. "No. You're now in the Netherlands, or what's left of them. It's quite a job to keep track of the minor pawns in the strategy of international chess."

"Holland! Gosh!"

Talcott would have liked to ask him his connection with Halsey and Struthers; there hadn't been any MacDowells mentioned in the hectic correspondence with Old Man Winters that he kept his post. After six years of sameness a new face, even a closemouthed one, was welcome. June Paterson supplied the lack with an endless round of questions about the extraction of nitrates, and they were on a fresh round of drinks when Halsey came up the path.

The new man's jaw was grim and his eyes were both puzzled and appraising. "Struthers wants to see you," Halsey said abruptly.

"So soon?" Talcott flushed. "Aren't you fellows in a bit of a rush?"

"I think you'd better go," Halsey said. Again his eyes held swift appraisal, mirroring perhaps incredulous disappointment.

Baffled, Talcott got to his feet. Turning to June Paterson he said, "I trust you will excuse me. The boy will get you anything you need."

The ash-blond girl regarded him with a quizzical smile. "Trouble in paradise," she laughed. "Do we dress for dinner?"

"If you wish," he said coldly. Whatever concern he had at the strangeness of Halsey's manner was stifled when he entered the office. In its hot interior, Struthers had surrounded himself with the books. The auditor's coat was off and his wet shirt clung to his skinny ribs. His eyes were enormous behind thick-lensed glasses, and he sniffed and said, "Talcott, you appear to be short in your accounts by $158,000. I suppose you've got some explanation."

CHAPTER II.

Bill Talcott's hand was out for a chair, his foot poised for a step. Thus he remained as if frozen, staring at the man behind the desk. "What's that?" he gasped.

The auditor coughed. "Under the system established by my firm you are required to procure duplicate vouchers signed by the authorized agents of the various vessels with whom you ship nitrates. The total of vouchers signed during the past year is short by that amount from your company ledger. In other words, $158,0000 worth of business is unaccounted for."

Bill Talcott's reflexes automatically completed the task of capturing a chair and occupying it. Nitrate dust, smelly, all-pervading, added as he flopped down. "You say I'm short?" he gasped again. "But that's impossible! All my vouchers are catalogued, in numerical order. They're in regular form, consecutively numbered!"

Struthers leaned forward, pushing the pile aside. In his manner was the supercilious contempt of the brainy man for the brawny one. "They're NOT all there," he said flatly.

Dazedly Talcott accepted the vouchers, searched, discovered a gap in the numbers; another and another. Big shipments, all of them. His amazement deepened to anger. Hotly he said, "I don't understand this. I went over the whole business as soon as I received Winters' cable that he was sending Halsey. We keep a monthly inventory. The vouchers were positively here no longer than a week ago."

Struthers lifted his shoulders. "Sorry. Mr. Winters' secretary particularly instructed me to check your vouchers. She said they h dn't received all the duplicates. Needless to say, I'm shocked."

Winters' secretary—The Old Man changed them as frequently as he changed shirts, which gave him the reputation of being the toughest boss on the Street. Was this the trick of a new girl, trying to make a berth for herself by putting a giant manager on a dizzy spot and in a hell of a jam? That wouldn't answer why the vouchers were missing from this office; it was fishy, but, too impossible to be taken seriously. Yet it was here. Cold sweat broke out along Talcott's spine.

"New York never called me about any missing vouchers," he said angrily. "Is this a frameup of the Old Man's to keep me on in his stinking hole? I've done my work, six years of it. Three years beyond my contract, twice as long as my best predecessor. If Winters thinks he can force me to stay here, he's crazy!"

Angry lights darkened Struthers' eyes. "Are you insinuating that I would stoop to accusing you of theft just to satisfy a client? Let me tell you, Talcott, I'm a bonded accountant and my firm has been established for more than 50 years. I'm happy to say that this sort of thing doesn't happen to us very often, but when it does we know how to proceed. Now, if there is an error I'll be very happy to see the others vouchers. In the meantime you need have no fears about remaining here. Under the circumstances I've coughed significantly; "it would be out of the question."

Talcott checked back angry words and in baffled rage strode from the office. Avoiding his house he headed for the worn stone pier where, short hours ago, Halsey and the auditor had landed.

The new man's arrival should have meant happiness for Bill Talcott; release after six deadly years. Economic affairs had been none too good when he and Lowell Byrd received their degrees; taking up their commissions in the army had been a logical step. Another hitch had followed for both of them, and at the end Federal Chemical had made flattering offers. Lowell Byrd, a captain now, had decided that the army was his career; Talcott with a mother to support, accepted the bait of more money.

Bill Talcott had no difficulty in spotting the new man, Halsey, and he guessed the little fellow would be the company auditor. But the other two, a mustached character and a slender blonde girl in plum-colored slacks, were entirely out of place.

When viewed from Federal Chemical's plush sanctum in New York prospects of life in the tropics had been thrilling. Bill Talcott had planned to send for his mother as soon as he was settled; he hadn't seen, until the moment of his arrival, how little was grasped. Months of patient, questioning letters passed to years until finally Lowell Byrd wrote of Mother Talcott's death. So he stayed on at Plant No. Six.

Something of Talcott's first crumbling hopes had shown in Halsey's eyes the moment the new man stepped from the mailboat. Was Halsey, realizing that Winters' flowery rhetoric didn't correspond to the facts, attempting a rotten trick to save himself?

Bill Talcott had done a good job; had spent a sixth of his life on a blistering rain-swept, wind-swept chunk of rock. Only his daily swims in the shark-infested waters of Anegada Passage had kept him from utter madness. Was it to end in disgrace and possible prison

The brassy sun was low over the jade green on the Carribbean when Bill Talcott reached a decision. Until Halsey, Struthers and the mysterious MacDowell had arrived, his affairs had been in perfect order. One or all of them had dealt the first hand; now Talcott, who knew something about poker himself, would wait for cards.

His eyes were thoughtful as he came up the path. With a start of memory he saw, on the terrace, the lax figure of June Paterson. She too, had arrived on the mailboat. Was she who claimed to be his best friend's cousin also in the game?

As quickly as it had come he dismissed the suspicion and, avoiding the terrace, went down for a swim.

As Timely As Tomorrow's War Map

Dinner was a complete farce. Despite excellent drinks and marvelous food the conversation was up by Black Sam, conversation was unbearable. Halsey was reluctant and hostile; Struthers, gloomily silent. The mustached MacDowell, too, was preoccupied and Talcott repeatedly felt his searching, cold-eyed scrutiny.

At long last June Paterson became openly rebellious. "I'm going for a walk," she announced. "Alone. I enjoy my conversation. I think I'm the brightest person I know. You gentlemen may continue your stupid game—whatever it is. Don't bother to wait up for me."

Halsey sprang to his feet and grinned ruefully. "Really, Miss Paterson, I'm dreadfully sorry. Been preoccupied, you know. New job and all that sort of thing. Can't I accompany you?"

"I wouldn't think of tearing you away."

Halsey captured her arm firmly. "I have been a terrible bore. I shall make it up to you. Please let me."

Her sullen, long-lashed eyes swept Bill Talcott. "If you insist, come along then."

Arm and arm they had reached the door when Bill Talcott said coldly, "Please don't go out."

Halsey turned in surprise. "And why not?"

"Because it's scarcely safe."

"Rubbish! Do I look like a child?" Talcott straightened a little in his chair. "I must insist that you do not leave here at night unless I accompany you."

June Paterson whirled, and flushing hotly cried, "Being my chaperon doesn't include the right of possession. I'll go where I like!" And pushing Halsey ahead of her she slammed out.

CHAPTER III.

Talcott was at the door when MacDowell moved suddenly blocking his path. "Let 'em go," the mustached one grunted. "If I know my women, that one can take care of herself."

He stood tensed, glaring down. "You may be a very smart man where you come from, Mr. MacDowell, but you don't know Abas Island!"

MacDowell shrugged. "Why all the ruckus? She's got Halsey with her. And believe me, he's the kind that don't scare so easily. Or maybe," MacDowell sucked at his teeth, grinned knowingly. said, "Maybe you go for her yourself, huh?"

Bill ignored the thrust, stepped back and slapped his hands. In immediate response a shadow loomed from the darkness of the terrace behind MacDowell and the mustached one turned defensively.

Bill said quietly, "Buckra white man and missy go out against my orders. Make Sebastien follow them."

The black boy nodded, said, "Yes, bass," and disappeared into the night.

MacDowell exhaled with relief, wiped sweat from his face, bit off the end of a cigar and remained in place before the door. "What is this " he drawled. "Mean to tell me nobody can take a walk around here?"

"You may take all the walks you like. It so happens that there are several hundred blacks on the island, and they're bad sometimes. Miss Paterson will be the first white woman that some of them have ever seen. I wouldn't care to be responsible for what might happen."

MacDowell's face became gray and the unlighted cigar sagged. "Good Lord, man, why didn't you tell us before? If I'd known it was like that, I wouldn't've stopped you!"

Talcott smiled icily. "I presume you were afraid I might prevent Halsey from telling Miss Paterson something I wouldn't want her to hear."

"Maybe," MacDowell hedged. He found a match, popped it into flame and dragged on the cigar. "Who's this guy Sebastien that you sent after them?"

"My overseer. He's half native. Under usual conditions the men will obey him."

"Under usual conditions—" MacDowell frowned and glanced uneasily at the terrace. "Suppose we ought to follow them?"

Talcott didn't answer. Indicating a chair he said "Sit down. It's time you and I had a little talk. In my correspondence with Federal Chemical, Halsey and the auditor are accounted for. Your name was never mentioned. I want to know who you are, and your purpose on Abas Island."

The directness of the attack caught the mustached one completely off guard. His eyes rounded, his facial muscles sagged and his mouth made an O. "You mean," he said, wetting his lips, "you don't know who I am?"

Talcott leaned forward until his calloused big-knuckled hand rested on the other's knee. "You are not an employee of Federal Chemical and you're not an auditor. I might have thought you were a traveling companion, but I doubt it Halsey and Struthers are seeking company just now. So what is your connection?"

Sweat showed above the mustached one's collar and the cigar revolved in his mouth. His face for a moment became even grayer. And then, unexpectedly, he laughed.

"That's pretty good!" he chuckled. "You claimin' you don't know why I'm here. For a minute you had me goin'."

Startling as it was the change of front served only to increase Bill Talcott's cold anger. "I repeat if it has occurred to you," he said icily, "that this frameup of the missing vouchers is as weak as water. By merely lifting a finger I could have the lot of you tossed in jail. Have you ever seen one of our tropical jails, Mr. MacDowell They have no roofs, and the sun boils down and there are rats and scorpions—"

"Protestin' ain't you!" Ugly red crept through the gray of MacDowell's cheeks. "And I thought you looked like a decent kind of guy. Why, you cheap crook!"

"Be careful how you talk," Talcott said calmly. "It happens that for every one of those vouchers there are two facsimiles. One is in the possession of the steamship lines that carried the nitrates, the other with the Netherlands government official who collects a tax on every pound taken from the island. The remittances have all been made to New York and the bank in Willemstad has a complete record." Bill Talcott leaned forward and his long fingers closed in a steel-like grip on MacDowell's knee. "You and your friends haven't a leg to stand on. Now, who are you and what is your game?"

"Lezgo my knee!" MacDowell yelled.

Bill Talcott's strong fingers released with a disdainful movement and the mustached one rubbed vigorously. The words had brought to his face a mixture of doubt and surprise, and Talcott followed his opening swiftly. "If Halsey pocketed those vouchers thinking he could force me to remain here, he'd better decide some of his time to studying Federal Chemical procedure. I and he and Struthers had access to those records and one of them must be the thief. Now, where do you come in?"

MacDowell stopped rubbing his knee. Plainly, he was annoyed. Some deep-seated conviction of his was being ruthlessly upset. His eyes clouded and the burned-out cigar sagged. As if weighing Talcott against some mental standard he set. Then, slowly, his hand moved to his pocket. It came away, bearing not identification papers, but a wicked, snub-nosed pistol.

"You claim Halsey and Struthers rigged a game on you?" he grunted. "That's what they say. I had you sized up for a decent sort of guy until you started to use threats. If you're innocent and got something to prove it like you say, I don't see what you're worryin' about. As for you not knowin' why I'm here, that's a laugh. Do I havta show you my badge?"

Talcott stared. "You're a detective?"

"You're startin' to get smart."

A painful flush stole through Bill Talcott's cheeks. He might have guessed the man's identity. If indeed he was the victim of a plot, the locus of origin was now swiftly revealed from Abas Island; thrust back 1,600 miles to the leather-chaired offices of Federal Chemical itself. But why? Had Old Man Winters gone crazy with war worries? Or was the "new" secretary attempting something more than merely holding her job? Was she in a conspiracy to take Federal Chemical for better than $150,000?

Or was a bigger game, one in which Talcott and Halsey and Struthers and even Old Man Winters himself were tiny unwitting pieces, relentlessly underway?

MacDowell hesitated, hefting the revolver. His eyes masked his thoughts now, the veiled, cunning eyes of the avid numbsmiter facing his quarry. To MacDowell it didn't matter whether Talcott was guilty or not; he was doing a job for which he was being paid His orders were to bring Talcott back if the auditor proved a shortage. The fact that there was a Dutch island entirely nothing to MacDowell. There hadn't been any officers at the dock. So far as he could see he was the only law on the island; there wouldn't be any embarrassing matters of extradition to worry about. MacDowell's biggest worry was the prospect of six more days of trying to keep something in his stomach.

That worry vanished from MacDowell's mind when he saw Talcott's face. Strained, white, tense, slanted eyes glaring into the blackness beyond the terrace. And then MacDowell heard it. Above the coughing of the wind in the palms sounded the sudden, imperative bleat of a whistle.

CHAPTER IV.

More than mere self-dramatization impelled Jane Paterson when she stormed from the bungalow. Her mood was climactic, an admission of defeat. Her immediate reaction was that she was acting like a fool; that her flippant treatment of Bill Talcott was as normal as the course she pursued with other males, and it was what he deserved.

It is true that she was spoiled. But she could not have been expected, then, to realize that her defense against masculine attacks had been carefully woven about a memory. A curly-headed bronzed young giant who had performed seemingly impossible feats in the altogether impossible game of water polo. A breath-taking handsome god who had come down from his heights to dance with her, to make her above other mortals by talking to her as if she had been a woman of his own age and station. That through a dozen years a faded, yellowing snapshot had been her shrine, with bits of worship brought to it by the infrequent leaves of Capt. Lowell Byrd.

Strange how such a thing took roots, became imbedded; the memory of a smile, a handclasp, a small gallant service. The truth was relentlessly cruel. In memory she had come to accept Bill Talcott as her own.

It was all so unreal, so childish. There had been the opportunity to visit Saint Thomas, to study native art for her degree thesis. She could not admit now that it was to be near him, to revel in his strength, his cleanness, his complete manliness. To stand before him with the background of the tropic moon setting to flame her hair, to see his eyes alight with the glow of her presence.

She could not have been expected to know that Abas was worlds removed from Charlotte Amalie; that Anegada Passage bridged more than distance. "Garbage heap," the nicer people in Saint Thomas disparagingly called Abas. And the shock of seeing him after so many years; dirty, smelly, unshaved. Hate he was, no longer the Bill Talcott of memory. A bitter, taciturn stranger had taken his place.

Desperately she hoped that he would never learn of her deception, that he would never question Lowell to discover that the idea of accompanying him back to New York had been hers alone.

"Funny," Halsey was saying "You read and hear so much about the tropic moon. Here we are and it's black as pitch. You hardly see your way about. Tough on the romantic notions of an old devil like me."

Halsey, she decided, was nice. He didn't stand around staring at and through her, didn't withdraw into a hard shell when she tried to flirt. And he didn't try to order her around as if she were only 16 years old. Halsey was clean cut and finely drawn, resilient as a saber. He looked as if he could be a lot of fun if you got to know him better. Quite frankly she said, "I'm afraid we were foolish to come out alone. Perhaps Mr. Talcott was right."

"Talcott! Rubbish! Don't let him scare you with his boogie woogie. Regular stock in trade of our hard-bitten plant managers. Like to impress you. Nothing but silly twaddle. Talcott's trouble is that he's just been here too long."

They were on a strip of beach, the elbow of a deep lagoon, The sand was gray in the darkness, and dark irridescent water lapped at their feet. Rocks flanked them on the land side and stretched away and upward. funnel-shaped, to the black, cloud-ridden sky. There were no stars, no moon, and the fitful wind of the sea was damp. A hot breath freighted with odors of tangled kelp; a lax, reluctant curtain against the island's all-blanketing smell of nitrate. Suddenly, she was sorry for Halsey.

"It seems terrible to think that you must shut yourself away in this place," she said softly.

"Eh?" Halsey was startled. "What's this? Oh, come now! I'm afraid we've treated you shabbily. You shouldn't feel that way about Abas, I rather like the place. There's my job, you know. A man must work."

She felt his arm groping for her and did not draw away. "You've treated me as well as I deserved. I had no business coming here. I've caused a great deal of tension."

"You're not the cause of that, my dear," Halsey's voice was grim. "I'm sorry that I'm not at liberty to explain just what has happened. I trust that, as Talcott claims, there has been a mistake."

She had been looking at the water. Her face turned quickly "I don't believe I understand."

"I can't tell you, my dear. I gather that Talcott is an old family friend. If he wants to reveal the matter, it's up to him."

He said it bluntly, biting off the words, and suddenly the implication was clear to June Paterson. Bill Talcott was suspected of speculation with the firm's money. It was utterly impossible. No matter how else he might have changed, Lowell's best friend was inherently honest.

She turned until her face was very near Halsey's. "There must be some mistake," she said in an unsteady voice. "I'm sure that whatever misunderstanding exists between you will be satisfactorily settled. He has been our friend for many years. We have only the highest regard for him."

Halsey's arm tightened about her, and frank admiration was in his eyes. "By Jove," he said softly. "I can only say that, with a girl like you pulling for him, the man's a fool if he—" He broke off sharply, frowning, and almost roughly pushed her away. Then in a strained voice he asked, "Care for a cigaret? Should have offered you one before."

She came near, raising on tiptoe to lightly brush his cheek with her lips. "You are very nice, Leonard Halsey," she said softly. "Thank you for that, and thank you for a cigaret."

He got one out for her after fumbling a bit. Offered it and stiffly held a match, the flame cupped in his hands. In a voice taut and furry as strained yarn he said, "I trust you understand my position, Miss Paterson. I'm a trouble shooter for Federal Chemical. I have about as much roots as sage bush; from month to month I never know where I'll be next. Maybe that's why I never married. Or maybe—" His voice grew deep and stronger. "If there should be any—anything wrong here, I have to return to New York. Under company procedure the auditor remains in charge until a complete inventory has been made. If anything is wrong, it won't be pleasant. As a friend of Talcott's you may come to help me in the next few weeks. I just want you to know that it's my job."

She said nothing, and Halsey, who had made a bad start with his match, was lighting another when she saw it. Her eyes distended wildly and every vestige of color drained from her face.

Halsey felt rather than saw her fear. "What's the matter?" he cried hoarsely.

Her eyes stared, fascinated. Her lips trembled in feeble utterance, "Don't move—right behind you—is Halsey!"

Halsey whirled, and in that moment the shrill bleat of a whistle sounded from the opposite end of the beach. Like the clicking of a camera shutter June Paterson saw the tableau. Face to face with Halsey an incredibly huge native bared startling white teeth and lowered his head on massive shoulders. When she saw that he was not alone, that others stood in the darkness behind him, her fear gave vent to a piercing scream.

Man In Her Heart

CHAPTER XXXVI

I DIDN'T forget today, Miss Laurie!" Sammy shouted.

The horse shied and almost unseated the boy as a famous movie actress placed a floral wreath about Kokoa's neck.

Photographers flashed their speed boxes like mad. A radio announcer thrust a portable microphone at her and shouted a request "for a few words."

"I only wish my father, Tim Laurie, were listening," she said, "so I could tell him I'm flying to Phoenix tonight to see him."

The president of the Mayfair Turf club presented Anne with a big gold cup and congratulated her while the photographers' flashlights twinkled again.

Rusty pushed his way through the crowd and grabbed Anne's hands in his and executed an impromptu dance.

COUNT IS BEATEN

"Attagirl, Annie!" he cried "You beat me, but I'm glad you did it! And we both beat Count and his gang with Moon Jade. He was clear out of the money!"

Reporters crowded around, among them Pat Barnes, demanding interviews—stories of how she had trained Kokoa.

"How about a date tonight?" Pat asked.

"Sorry, Pat," Anne answered, "I'm flying to see Tim. Some other time." She moved away.

"There won't be any other time," Rusty grated in Pat's ear, "because I'm flying to Phoenix with her, Scram!"

Anne was hustled away for a formal presentation of a check for $54,000 in the turf club. The extra amount was the added money paid by owners whose horses had started.

Doc Burgess was dragged forward to receive a $5,000 check as the winning trainer.

With the celebration at its height, Anne quietly slipped through the crowd hugging the gold cup in her arms and made for the stables.

She sank down on a bale of hay and smilingly watched the grinning Cephus and several admiring volunteers giving Kokoa the rubdown of his life.

RUSTY

Rusty found her there ten minutes later.

"I've been looking all over for you. Mind if I sit down?"

"Help yourself." Anne made room beside her.

"I've gotta talk fast, because the plane's leaving in an hour and there's lots to be done."

"What plane?"

"Yours. You said you were flying to Phoenix, didn't you?"

"The regular ship doesn't leave until eight. I'll have to phone for a reservation."

"Your plane leaves in an hour—I just made the arrangements. There are two seats beside the pilot's, and I'm going with you."

"Thanks, Rusty, that isn't necessary. I want to tell Tim exactly what has happened since I came here. I can be truthful now."

"So you don't want me along, then?"

"What will Brenda say?"

"I started to tell you the other day, that—"

YOU AND BRENDA

"Never mind," Anne interrupted. "I know all about it. I overheard Pat telling Doc that you and Brenda were engaged, and —"

"Wait a minute I don't know where they got their dope, but they're all wrong!"

"Then what were you trying to say when Brenda dragged you away?"

"In my own stupid way, I was trying to tell you that I've been daffy about you ever since the first day you came here. Of course, you're pretty thick with Pat, but I thought maybe—"

"Rusty, do you mean it?" Anne shrieked. "You're not kidding again?"

"I was never more serious in my life. It's a terrible way to propose, but that's what I'm trying to get over. I never asked a girl to marry me before and I'm pretty much of an amateur, but if you'll have me—"

Her answer was instantaneous and vigorous. She threw herself into his arms with such force that they both tumbled from the hay onto the ground.

They sat there locked in a tight embrace for several minutes, while Cephus and his pals grinned so broadly that their faces threatened to split in half.

SPEAKIN' HIS MIND

"Dawg gone," Cephus chuckled. "Ah thought Mistah Rusty nevah was goin' to get 'round to speakin' his mind."

After awhile Anne recovered a trace of sanity, pushed Rusty away and stood up.

"How about this Brenda business?" she demanded, severely. "You said you fell for me the very first day you saw me."

"Well, I gotta got detoured, but I never was really serious with her."

"You gave a pretty good imitation, and—"

Rusty stopped her lips in a most effective way and then, holding her at arm's length, asked a perfectly superfluous question. He had only to look at her to read the answer: "Happy, darling?"

"Marvelously happy."

"Isn't there one thing you want?" he demanded.

Anne hesitated.

"Well, I'm still burned by the way those crooks took Moon Jade away from me," she said, finally.

Rusty reached in his pocket, brought out several legal appearing papers and handed them to her.

WEDDING PRESENT

"Here's your wedding present—Moon Jade and all the other nags those high binders owned."

"What—how—when—" she stuttered.

"When I heard Count was trying to hook his stable to bet on Moon Jade, I dug $10,000 out of my sock —all I had—and offered to bet it against his stable that he wouldn't beat Sky Writer. He thought I was a sucker and snapped at it."

"How did you know Moon Jade wouldn't win? You took an awful chance."

"I knew Count hadn't trained him right—I was counting on that. Now we can put our horses together and have a pretty respectable outfit. I've left Van Evers, you know."

Anne expressed her approval and thanks by standing on tip toe and kissing him.

"There's just one favor I want to ask, Rusty—about the stable. Won't you please count me out and just let me keep house?"

"Of course. I counted on that, too. I've always said a woman has no business around a race track."

THE END.

Commissioner Back

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—S. F. Waterson, South African high commissioner, has just returned to England after a tour of the Middle East with Gen. Tale Of Death Is Unfolded At Murder Hearing

Statements made by Pierre Cougan, Janvier reserve treaty Indian, prior to and after his wife's death, featured the evidence given at his trial in supreme court here before Mr. Justice T. M. Tweedie and a jury on a charge of murder.

Cougan is charged with causing his wife's death at their Chipewyan prairie farm home on September 4 last. This is the third time he has been placed on trial on the charge, the first two trials resulting in the jury failing to agree upon a verdict.

"DEATH MEDICINE"

Alice Lemaigre, a Whitefish Lake Indian, testified that Cougan had told her that he was going to get a Cree Indian to give him medicine that would kill his wife. He also stated, the witness testified, that he would kill a person just like breaking a match.

She testified that Cougan had asked her to live with him, and admitted that he had given her presents of flour, tea and sugar.

Mrs. Lemaigre related a conversation she had with Cougan the morning of his wife's death in which the accused had asked her why she would not speak to him and asked if she was afraid of him? The witness told the court she gave as her reason for silence that "she had a headache."

She told the court that Cougan was jealous of her, and that he had stated that he would be blamed for his wife's death as he was the only person in the cabin with her on the night of the murder.

She testified also that Cougan, during this conversation, had intimated he wanted to see the police, and that "it would not help him to run away as that would make it appear he had committed the murder."

PROMISED STORY

Pierre M. Janvier told the court that Cougan had said after his wife's death that he "was going to say a long story about my wife but if say one word you will never see me again." He then said that "Alice Lemaigre had killed his wife," the witness testified.

Chief Alphonse Peche, chief of the White Fish Lake Indian band, told of the association with Cougan and Mrs. Lemaigre. This association, he testified, had caused him to speak to Cougan of his conduct. He was told by the accused that "you are not my chief, and it is not your business."

Chief Peche told the court that the accused had quarrels with his wife, and that on one occasion he had asked him why the "wife had run out of his house at night." The accused had replied, "leave me alone I know what is crazy."

"I told him that he was poor now, but you will get worse if you kill somebody," he testified. Cougan replied, the witness stated, "that I know the law, and if a needle could go through it I can go through it." He said the accused then took a match and stated "I could kill just like that," and then broke the match and tossed it on the ground.

Emily Janvier, wife of Chief Janvier, testified to the unhappiness of Mary Cougan just prior to her death. She said that the accused, immediately prior to the murder, had stated to her that "a big trouble will be going on on the reserve pretty soon."

R.C.A.F. Benevolent Fund Receives Big Boost

The R.C.A.F. has received cheques totalling $11,000 for its work in promoting the Air Cadet League of Canada and the R.C.A.F. Benevolent Fund. In Toronto, Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., on behalf of the R.C.A.F. received a cheque for $5,000 from the T. Eaton Co., presented by Col. R. Y. Eaton, (left), and John David Eaton (right), for the Air Cadet League. There was a cheque for $1,000 from Vitagraph, on behalf of Warner Bros. for the part the R.C.A.F. played in filming the picture "Captains of the Clouds," and $5,000 from the same company for the R. C. A. F. Benevolent Fund.

lod of three days before payment of compensation for an accident begins was asked also, and that such payment date from the hour of the accident.

The Federation sought the payment of $100 cash immediately following a fatal accident to the widow or other dependents of the injured man, and that this amount be paid in addition to the $125 now allowed for funeral expenses.

The brief suggested that the monthly allowance paid to widows be increased from $35 to $45, and that a widower with dependents be paid $45 and $15 for each dependent child. Where children are the only dependents the monthly payment should be $20 for each dependent under 18 years, it was suggested.

It was suggested also that where a single person's death is caused by accident to which the act applies, the average cost to the board of such an accident should be capitalized, and the amount should be payable to the workman's parents.

Another suggested amendment would provide that where a workman is injured in rescue work in a mine that he be paid 100 per cent compensation instead of the 66 2-3 per cent as now paid.

Two City Fliers Listed As Missing

Extensive air operations against Nazi-held Germany of late has resulted in two well-known Edmontonians being listed as missing.

The two are Fit.-Lt. James Constable-Maxwell, University of Alberta graduate, whose parents now live at Vancouver, and Flying Officer Charles F. Race, FO. Race is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Race of 10532 130 street.

Fit. Lt. Constabaris was an outstanding law student, having graduated with three major awards, the chief justice's gold medal in law, the Carswell prize in the faculty of law, and the National Trust prize in law.

Although he suffered a broken back in an accident in July, 1941, he was able to return to service and flying after being administrative officer at Claresholm for some time.

FO. Race enlisted in 1940 and has been a member of the RCAF. Demon Squadron, since its formation. He was mentioned in dispatches for his part in the attack on the three fleeing German warships in the channel some time ago.

He attended Oliver Public and Garneau High schools here and was a popular member of the younger set.

Premier Will Speak Social Credit Meet

Premier William Aberhart will address a public meeting at the Social Credit hall, Jasper avenue East, at 8 p.m. Wednesday on "The Road of Finance."

The meeting is open to the public. It is sponsored by the Edmonton social Credit Constituency association.

David Duncan and Mrs. Wigginton will speak briefly on "The Money Racket". Hon. E. C. Manning, minister of trade and industry, will preside.

Getting Around

of stable masters and drivers skilled in the handling and care of horses is also getting under way.

Explaining the Back-to-horses movement, Lt.-Col. Burton-Willson said:

"We all have to save gasoline and tires and the situation may become much worse in this respect before long. So we felt we should do our best to save gas and tires here.

For short hauls the horses will be a great saving. If I want a load of something or other moved around the camp now, I have to order a lorry to make the trip. Even if the trip is short, there's a lot of gasoline used in starting up and changing gears. With horses we can do these trips and there's no gas or rubber used."

The officer admitted the horseless carriage age has been in swing so long however, that it is a problem to secure men trained in handling and caring for horses and harness.

In the early days of the automobile it was a favored jibe of the still-confident "horsemen" to jeeringly offer a tow to the broken-down gas buggy.

Even much later, any ancient-looking gas jallopy, wheezing and coughing along the main atem, was pretty certain to bring a shouted sarcastic admonition of: "Get a horse!"

And now, under greatly changed auspices, Old Dobbin is once more coming to the rescue of the gas buggy that all but drove him from the highways and byways of the land.

Perhaps before this war is over it will indeed take "all the king's horses and all the king's men" to put things on an even keel again.

Red Cross Fund Nears $260,000

Contributions to the Canaian Red Cross Society from northern Alberta neared the $200,000 mark up to Monday night, campaign officials stated Tuesday.

From the parcels-for-prisoners drive conducted Saturday, $4,563.80 was accounted for Tuesday, with more returns still to be checked. City donations up to Monday night, including the parcels fund totalled $120,874.20, and country donations to the same time were $79,123.87.

Included in city donations was a contribution of $1,000 from the employees of Burns & Co., Ltd.

Mountain Snows Trapped Robber

BRIDGE RIVER, B.C, June 2.—(CP)—Trapped in the Bridge River country by snow still lying in the mountain passes, George W. Danchella, 26-year-old mine mucker, was forced to come out of the hills and seek a getaway by railway, a move which led to his arrest on a charge of robbing the Bank of Toronto at Pioneer Thursday and escaped with close to $4,000.

Danchella was brought here by speeder Monday night from Pemberton Meadows, near where he was captured by police late Sunday after an Indian, Martin Williams, disbelieved his story he was hunting bear and reported to police.

The former mine mucker was charged here with robbery with violence. All but $7 of the $3,657 taken in the robbery was recovered.

Second Victim Of Train Wreck Dies Of Injuries

KAMLOOPS, B.C., June 2.—(CP)—W. H. Stout of Vancouver, Canadian National Railways express messenger injured in last Thursday's train wreck at Avola, B.C., died in hospital here last night.

The express messenger was the second fatality of the wreck, which also injured 70 persons, some seriously. C. Gordon McKenzie, C.N.R. bridge engineer from Vancouver, died of injuries four hours after the crash.

Great Need Of More Security Is Emphasized

crumbs off the capitalistic table. By your vigorous activity as a society you may increase the amount of crumbs but you will not obtain a complete program of social security until reorganization of the system is complete," Mr. Ronning warned.

"Today we have the physical possibilities to provide every young one with education, every middle-aged one with work and every old one with security," he said.

CAN AFFORD SECURITY

"If we can afford to train and educate men for the noble work of war, we can certainly afford to provide similar needs in times of peace. security for the aged included," he stated.

"The problem of old age pensions and social security cannot be solved as long as the control of industry and finance is left in the hands of private interests," Mr. Ronning stated.

He emphasized that the aged have not lost their usefulness to society simply because they have reached the age of inactivity. The nation should recognize them for what they are now worth to society as well as rewarding them for what they have already contributed, he stated.

"It is positively iniquitous, it is not Christian that such a wealthy nation as Canada should allow an aged person to be practically reduced to the state of a pauper before he is entitled to a pension," Mr. Ronning said.

Alderman Ainlay, who preceded Mr. Ronning, stated that the amount of pension should be all that the state can provide out of production from year to year. Sixty-five should be the absolute top age as most men at the age of 55 or 60 are not fit for further work, he said.

WORK IMPOSSIBLE

Proof of this is the experience of men at 55 and even younger who find it impossible to acquire work once they lose the job they previously had, Mr. Ainlay explained.

The one thing in the path of the Canadian people who are the happiest in the world today is the weight they must carry on their shoulders a worrying about their social security in old age, he emphasized.

There is no place in the world that could remove that burden easier than Canada could. She is blessed with a wealth of natural resources, and has a small population of nearly 12,000,000 active and resourceful inhabitants, but social security will not be achieved until the industrial development in Canada is socialized and the aged get the benefits thereof, Mr. Ainlay explained.

He stated that there is no doubt in his mind that the people of Canada generally, as well as the Canadian government, believe that the old-age pensions are a form of relief.

A pension is something that is paid because it has been earned. It is not a handout. It is not charity. It is a credit with the nation that was earned during the person's active years and is being paid in his old age, Mr. Ainlay explained.

APPLIES TO ALL

It is not a pension unless it is paid to each and every citizen who has attained a certain age. A millionaire has as much right to a pension as has one who reached the pensionable age penniless, he remarked.

Mr. Ronning paid tribute to the late J. S. Woodsworth as the founder of the C.C.F. party and the father of national pensions. He gave Mr. Woodsworth and William Irvine, M.P. for Calgary, credit of the C. C. F. credit for being the prime movers in the House of Commons for the social aid pension scheme as far back as 1922.

Major L. Bullock-Webster, director of community drama of the education department, University of British Columbia, passed through Edmonton Tuesday on his way to the Peace River Block Festival at Pouce Coupe, at which he will adjudicate. He has been adjudicating in the Okanagan Valley, and at Mc-Bride. Mr. Bullock-Webster was in the recent train accident at Avola, and received slight injuries to one leg.

City Enjoyed Excitement In Good Old Days

mayor—as the first mayor and appointed that year — Matthew McCauley, after whom the McCauley school is named, and the chief executive of the local detachment ment of the North West Mounted Police, Supt. A. H. Griesbach, father of Maj. Gen. W. A. Griesbach, C.B. C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., K.C., had several delicate, but firm and far-reaching conversations.

Edmonton and Strathcona were fused into one city in 1912, thus permanently ending the rivalry existing on opposite banks of the Saskatchewan.

Rumor had it at the time, that the mayor advised the policeman not to use force unless (if you do some-one is likely to get shot and it will probably be you or me."

The land office was located at the corner of 100 avenue and 106 street, where Victoria Armory now stands.

GOOD MEN AND TRUE

A current report of the affair stated "five hundred men with blood in both eyes were engaged Saturday afternoon in demonstrating that even in this dull down, in this peaceful country, physical force as a means of maintaining public right is not played out."

Previously J. M. Gordon, inspector of land agencies had advised the local agent to remove his office to a box car, which had been leased from the railway company, pending the completion of an office then under construction, but the purpose of which was, until then, unknown. The dray company provided the wagon and team and loading of the books began.

The next episode took place when the crowd gathered round, took the nuts from the wagon axles and unhitched the horses so the staff already loaded could not be moved.

POLICE AID SOUGHT

The agents sought assistance of the police, but nothing could be done as the wagons could not be moved without horses and other horses were not to be had.

Telegrams were sent fast and more horses ordered from Strathcona, but the horses were taken from the wagons, unloaded and the drivers informed that they must not interfere. Finally horses and wagons were driven across the river and into the other side. Resolutions were drawn up by Mayor McCauley demanded the office be left on the north side, and a citizens guard placed round the equipment. A police guard also arrived.

Supt. Griesbach came in from Fort Saskatchewan with 20 policemen, which he left at Rat Creek, outside the town limits, near the site of the former city incinerator on the Fort Trail.

The home guard which had been organized in 1885 by Lt.-Col. Strange was called out by the mayor "to keep the peace—that is, the land office." Almost every able-bodied man was there—most of them armed — and ready for any eventuality.

FOUR DAYS ON JOB

The guard remained for four days. On the fourth day the land office fell and the books were threatened. Police moved them to shelter, and some watchful enthusiast saw the movement and mistaking its object gave the alarm.

All the bells were rung, and in eight minutes, by the watch, not less than 150 men were around the land office with a hundred or two more coming as fast as they could.

On the Tuesday telegrams started coming into Edmonton from Ottawa and Regina, including one from Sir Alfrid Laurier, premier of Canada, who stated his attention had been drawn "to condition of things" in Edmonton.

The matter was eventually cleared up with the land office remaining in Edmonton — but it was a hectic week for those who knew their rights and demanded them.

It has remained here ever since.

One-Day Parley Is Held By Churches

Concerned with united action in the home, the church and the community, a one-day convention opened at All Saints' parish hall, Tuesday morning. Attending were representatives of various religious denominations in Edmonton. Speakers during the day included Rev. Dr. H. Priest and Rev. H. C. Burkholder. Devotion was led by Rev. Daniel Young and Rev. Canon A. M. Trendell.

The convention is similar to others planned without Canada and the United States, sponsored by 40 denominations in the States, and all the local Christian denominations in Canada.

At the evening session Tuesday, a play "The Living Church" will be presented by the Anglican Young People.
